Toll in Blast Goes To 16

Sixteen dead, an undetermined number unaccounted for, several hundred injured in hospitals, and millions in damage to property, was the toll of an explosion of three huge tanks of natural gas owned by the Equitable Gas Company at the foot of Reedsdale street, at 8:42 o'clock this morning.

Fund Begun

F. E. Laty, after driving through the devastated explosion district, came to the Sun-Telegraph office and left a check for $50 to start a relief fund for the families of the dead.

Sparks from blow torches of workmen repairing a supposedly empty tank was given as the cause of the blast which rocked the city and environs with cataclysmic violence.

Thirteen bodies were in the morgue at 2 p. m. with two others dead in hospitals. Thirteen employes of the Riter Conley Company engaged in repairing one of the giant gas tanks are missing and 11 of them are believed dead.

Only eight of three score men working in the North Side city asphalt plant as the tanks let go are accounted for. Every available man of the highways department is clearing away the debris.

Other bodies were being taken from the wreckage of the Union Paint Company's plant across the street from the scene of the blast.

North Side Hospitals were filled with victims of the terrific blast which rocked the entire city, broke windows for several miles, wrecked sewers, water and gas lines, tore down electric light wires and caused lofty downtown skyscrapers to tremble and sway as if hit by an earthquake.

FIRST AID GIVEN

Trucks, taxicabs, police patrols, hose wagons of fire companies were pressed into service to carry injured to hospitals. Emergency quarters were hastily improvised near the scene to give first aid.

Telephone communication with the North Side was paralyzed and to all parts of the city was hampered. Unable to get information concerning the explosion thousands rushed to the scene while police established danger lines and kept back the crowd from the streets in the vicininty of lower River avenue and Reedsdale street, flooded by broken water mains and carrying death-dealing current from charged light wires that had fallen.

TRAPPED IN FACTORY

A large factory building of the Union Paint Company across the street from the exploding tank was blown down, a force of workmen being caught under the falling roof.

Death, Ruin Trail Blast

A burst of gigantic flame that threw a ghostly red light over the whole city—a roar of greater volume than a thousand Niagaras—a shock like a mighty earthquake—a fiery cloud of smoke that reached the clouds in the Heavens—this followed the setting off of millions of cubic feet of gas in the Manchester tanks of the Equitable Gas company at 8:40 o'clock this morning.

The crash of rending metal, the jangle of shattered glass in windows within a radius of five miles, the rasping of broken timbers and the rumble of crumbling walls, and then the shrieks of the dying, the groans of the hundreds of injured and the anguished cries of fugitives that fled from their ruined homes and cried for their loved ones—these were the sounds

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—President Coolidge on January 11, 1927, in a message or statement explained very clearly and convincingly the causes which compelled the United States to intervene in the political complications which had arisen in Nicaragua.

CALLES

He showed that the treaty which the United States had with Nicaragua for the construction of an interoceanic canal involved certain obligations on the part of Nicaragua toward the United States and of the United States toward Nicaragua.

He showed that the various nations of Central America had united in a plan to preserve peace and insure political freedom in Nicaragua.

He showed that the Government of Mexico had proceeded to foment revolutions in Nicaragua in an effort to depose the rightfully elected President of Nicaragua, and that the United States, having assumed obligations in regard to the canal, under an agreement made with other Central American nations and to protect the Monroe Doctrine, sent troops to maintain order and sustain the newly and constitutionally elected government of Nicaragua.

U. S. INTERVENTION WAS NOT ONLY JUSTIFIED BUT ALSO IMPERATIVE

It was clear that in the Nicaraguan situation there were American rights to be protected, the

HAVOC IN BLAST TORN AREA IS APPALLING

The havoc caused by the explosion to houses in the immediate vicinity of the blast was appalling. Women and children whose homes were shaken rushed to the streets, some suffering from cuts and wounds, and many of them screaming from [illegible] or injuries. In the great throng that rushed to the explosion scene were many mothers hunting fractically for their children, fearing they had been caught in the explosion.

Hardly a pane of glass in houses and buildings within a dozen blocks of the explosion remain. To add confusion to the wreck and ruin, a large water main broke in Reedsdale street and at the corner of Galveston avenue and other crossings in that vicinity the water on the streets was six inches deep. One of the streets to suffer most was was Strong street, where the windows in two rows of houses were shattered.

Further away on Ridge avenue, scores of windows were broken, and many more on Galveston avenue, Reedsdale street and Walker street. The terrific blast carried huge pieces of iron to many points within a mile of the explosion. One piece weighing more than 500 pounds landed on steps in front of a three-story brick house at 1004 Ridge avenue. Many of the windows in that and other houses nearby were broken. Other large pieces of iron landed in the freight yards of the Pittsburgh and Western Railroad.

Within a few minutes after the explosion, traffic jammed on the Manchester Bridge but police with motorcycles managed, with much difficulty, to keep one side of the bridge open for ambulances, patrol wagons and other vehicles going to the scene of the disaster.

BLAST DAMAGE MAY TOTAL $5,000,000

NORTH SIDE POTTERY PLANT WRACKED AND BROKEN BY CONCUSSION. IT WAS FEARED MANY HAD DIED HERE

EXPLOSION DAMAGE MAY TOTAL $5,000,000

Estimates of the damage in the immediate neighborhood of the North Side explosion range from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000. The tank which exploded was valued at $500,000. A 6,000,000 cubic foot tank adjoining was badly twisted, while a smaller tank of 800,000 cubic feet capacity near Reedsdale street was damaged.

Glass was driven out of the entire front of the Joseph Horne Company ehouse on Reedsdale street and rner of the building smashed by ing steel girder. There was some damage to the interior from water, but no figure was set by the management.

The Kaufmann's store warehouse in South avenue also was badly damaged, although no definite estimates were available. Windows were taken out completely on the side toward the explosion.

The city asphalt plant and the plant of the Union Paint Company, south of the tank, were wrecked, and a number of the casualties were reported in the asphalt plant.

Two blocks of dwellings from 1116 to 1246 Reedsdale street had their fronts smashed in by the concussion. Furniture was ripped to kindling in the rooms, and jagged linters of steel cut through the oden frames. Many were injured e, but the property damage will run high, as the houses were mostly of inexpensive type.

West of the explosion scene a number of the industrial buildings were battered into a dangerous condition by the blast. Plants of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Company and the Pittsburgh Grey Iron and Foundry Company were heavily damaged.

The actual property loss to the Equitable Gas Company through the explosion is estimated at a minimum of $2,000,000. While the company is a subsidiary of the Philadelphia Company, and is one of the Standard Gas and Electric group of public utilities controlled by Byllesby & Co., of Chicago, it is said that it stands on its own feet as a financial unit.

With property damage and the loss of live involved, the question of compensation is a staggering one, however the responsibility may be ultimately fixed. Compensation in the deaths of employes of the gas company and the Riter-Conley Company employed in the tank is fixed under workmen's compensation insurance.

Police, Firemen, Heroes Of Tank Blast

Police and firemen did heroic work today. In more than one instance men from the city safety deparements risked their lives in rescue and relief work at the scene of the disastrous Equitable Gas Company explosion on the North Side.

Practically the entire tenement district of lower Reedsdale street was wrecked, the two and three-story buildings buckling and caving in many places. Fire apparatus was pressed into service getting victims out of their demolished homes and starting them on their way to hospitals.

In one instance Traffic Officer Sylvester Steehr plunged into the Ohio River and rescued a four-year-old child who had been blown into the water from her home aboard a houseboat. The child was Pauline Popovitch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Popovitch. The mother also was injured and both were taken to the hospital.

Other acts of heroism, no less spectacular, occurred throughout the district and cut and bruised police and firemen, injured while probing the wreckage for victims, were a common sight.

When the Central Station patrol arrived on the scene, the wagonmen, John Hooper, Michael Horn and Hugh Lavery began making a house-to-canvass. Six trips to various hospitals were made with loads of from six to nine.

From a house at 1213 Ridge avenue, the officers report they took a woman who had just given birth to a baby. The mother was cut by glass.

Department store trucks were pressed into service to take the injured to the hospitals.

Some of the homeless victims were taken to local hotels.

The example of captains who stay with their ships until all of their men are accounted for was emulated in the monster explosion today by Supt. Edward Keeler, in charge of the Equitable Gas Company on Shore avenue, where the blast occurred.

His head and face battered by a piece of flying steel from one of the tanks, Keeler refused to leave his post even to have his wound dressed. Internes from the Allegheny General Hospital bandaged his head and face as he lay a few hundred feet from the scene of the blast, and within 15 minutes he was back in the heart of the debris.

Easily discernible because of his white shirt and the bloody bandage, Keeler toiled with the firemen and policemen in their efforts to extricate dead and wounded, remaining until long after noon, when he was forced to leave by sheer exhaustion.

$100,000 Relief Fund Planned By City

Council will be asked to pass an emergency ordinance immediately setting aside $100,000 for relief purposes in the wrecked North Side district, where tousands were made homeless by today's explosion. The Mayor, Director of Public Safety James M. Clark and Superintendent of Police Peter P. Walsh took charge of the work in the district a short time after the blast. Heads of various city and county departments also took charge of the work of their divisions.

DEMAND FOR RESCUERS PUTS INJURED TO WORK

Harry McCullough, of 507 Allegheny avenue, whose home is three blocks from the scene of the Reedsdale street explosion, stood in the doorway of his house an hour after the blast and just then realized he had suffered a bruise on his head when the kitchen door was knocked from its hinges and catapulted him the entire length of the house. McCullough scrambled to his feet and kept on going, for he knew that death and misery had followed that terrific uproar.

"I started down toward the gas works to help if I could," said McCullough, "but the moment I reached the street a man ran into my arms and sank to the pavement, carrying me down with his weight. A piece of heavy plate glass had struck him square in the neck and the blood was gushing from an ugly wound.

"I got up and made a fresh start. I saw a woman looking out of a window, where the glass had been blown in and her face looked as if she had been showered with a double charge of birdshot. Just then a live wire touched the pavement, squirming and sputtering almost at my feet. I changed my direction into an alley. Here two women tumbled out of a rear window, wearing only their nightclothing. They had been blown from their beds and when they recovered their senses they leaped headlong from the window.

"The women had been cut and bruised and were bleeding profusely. By this time the streets and alleys, backyards and sides of the hills were filled with people who were pouring from their houses. I assisted the two injured women back to my home and gave them some of my clothing. Bundled up in this, we sent them away in an ambulance.

"Going toward the gas works again, I found there was little to do. The police and firemen and the ambulance men did good work and did it quickly. Like nearly every other man in Manchester, I found that my folks thought I was missing. In every house some one was not accounted for and up until now we have been trying to quiet the fears of the women. My head is feeling mighty sore and I think I'll hunt some linament."

McCullough's experience was not unlike hundreds of other men in the disaster district who assisted others unmindful of their own injuries.

"Kill Looters!"-- Order Issued To Police

All available policemen and firemen were ordered to the North Side for what probably will be at least a 21-hour turn of duty by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark today. A cordon of police with instructions to shoot to kill will be thrown about the entire district tonight to prevent looting. The wrecked warehouses of several large department stores offered tempting bait for robbers.

The Salvation Army lost no time reaching the scene, doughnuts and coffee being distributed to rescue workers.

EX-KAISER BUYS ISLANDS AT LOCARNO FOR HOME

LONDON, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—A Geneva dispatch to the Daily Express says the former German Kaiser has bought two small islands in Lake Maggiore, facing Locarno, Switzerland. One island is to be rechristened "Island of the World's Peace." It is reported that the ex-Kaiser intends to build a winter residence there. The purchase for £14,000 (roughly $70,000) was effected by the ex-Kaiser's business manager, Baron von der Rheidt.

Graphic Details Of Explosion At a Glance

Fifteen are known dead, upwards of 200 injured in terrific blast of 5,500,000 cubic-foot tank of Equitable Gas Company, Reedsdale street, North Side.

Telephone, light and trolley poles and wires down within half-mile of the scene.

Many manufacturing plants and hundreds of homes in vicinity damaged.

Among the injured are scores of children struck en route to school.

Buildings in downtown Pittsburgh, South Side, Homestead and McKeesport shaken. The Oliver Building swayed as in a breeze.

Deep Water Cramps Ambulance Work

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

A deafening roar, a wave of heat, flying debris and then pandemonium, today ushered in one of the greatest catastrophies Pittsburgh has ever known.

It came at a few minutes before 9, when a huge gas tank of the Equitable Gas Company, Reedsdale avenue, exploded.

Patrolmen and firemen with bloodstained faces helped screaming men, women and children into ambulances and police patrols, which drove through water up to the running boards. Windows for blocks around were smashed; people were blown about their homes like chips.

One woman is known to be dead. An officer took time to say they "picked the pieces up" and that she lived across the street from the tragedy. Shortly after a screaming woman begged for news of her daughter, whom she could not find.

She gave her name as Mrs. Grace Shimp of 1200 Sherman street, and her daughter, missing, as Mrs. Lida Corman of 1240 Reedsdale avenue.

One man said only two men were on the gas tanks.. Another said at least 75 workerd neas enough to meet death.

Patrolman Herbert E. Aiken was blown from a window of his home at 1008 Reedsdale street, and his wife is suffering from severe injuries and shock. He heroically went about rescue work with his legs and hand lacerated.

Mrs. H. L. Mieglitz, of 1004 Reedsdale street, told of having been blown from her bedroom into the dining room. A butcher shop in the same building, managed by Elmer Kneib, was wrecked. How the occupants escaped with their lives is a mystery. Windows were smashed, doors blown in and a part of the wall had fallen.

It is said that the Kaufmann warehouse near the scene may cave in at any moment.

Treacherous charged wires underneath the water that flows in the streets added great danger to the rescue work.

The Red Cross arrived early trying to help calm the hysterical and reunite families. There were heartrending scenes as mothers found their children who had been playing in the streets.

Strong men cried, so pitiful was the scene.

Other Distasters In Alleg^h^eny County

1845, April 10—Great fire in Pittsburgh; two lives lost and $9,000,000 property damage.

1862, September 17—Allegheny Arsenal powder magazine explosion; 72 miunition workers, the majority being women and girls, killed.

1874, July 26—Butchers Run flood; heavy loss of life following a cloudburst in the East street district of old Allegheny.

1898, February 9—Pike street fire; 18 firemen and spectators killed in explosion of chemicals in a storage warehouse.

1902, May 16—Naptha explosion in the Sheraden railroad yards; 29 persons killed, 300 injured and $500,000 property damage.

1904, January 25—Harwick mine explosion at Cheswick; 179 men entombed and killed.

1917, December 24—South Hills Tunnel trolley accident, 30 killed and 68 injured when Knoxville street car ran wild.

1918, May 4—Oakdale munition plan explosion when tons of TNT let go; buildings and plant were burned, resulting in a loss of 93 lives.

LEAKING GAS AND BLOW TORCH CAUSE BLAST

Gas leaking through a connecting pipe from a filled twin tank to an empty one, in which workmen were uisng a blow torch, caused the Reedsdale plant explosion, in the opinion of George Rowland, of the Equitable Gas Company, who called at the morgue to aid coroner's officials in checking the list of dead.

"One of two large twin tanks was filled and the other empty," Rowland told morgue employes. "A foreman and 12 men of the Riter-Conley Company, which constructed the tanks and maintained them, were engaged inside the empty tank making repairs.

"It is my opinion that gas leaked through a pipe connecting the twin tanks and was ignited by sparks from the blow torch, the flame carrying through the connecting pipe and igniting the filled twin tank," Rowland said.

Police and Fire Stations Are Thrown Open

Director of Public Safety James M. Clark and Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh at noon ordered every police and fire station in the city placed at the disposal of those made homeless in the disaster.

Shell-Shocked Veteran Driven Mad by Blast

The hail of death which followed the North Side explosion, as broken girders and bits of steel hurled through the air in their path of destruction, drove George W. Thompson, war veteran, of 1039 Fifth avenue, back to the mental state brought about by shell-shock during the war.

Screaming in agony of fear, he alternately crouched and ran toward the blast scene shouting:

"Bombs! More bombs! Bombs!"

Nathan Doyle of 103 Grabon street, led him out of the danger zone, into his car and to South Side Hospital. Three hours later he was still raving of "Bombs! Bombs! Bombs!"

$3,000 OPENS RED CROSS BLAST RELIEF FUND

As its disaster committee established headquarters near the scene of the fatal North Side gas tank explosion, checks and cash began to arrive at the Pittsburgh chapter, American Red Cross, to aid in relief of the injured and homeless. At noon more than $3,000 had been received.

Every physician, nurse and social worker in the Red Cross organization was at work within an hour after news of the disaster reached Augustus K. Oliver, chairman. A noon meeting of the executive committee was held in the Chamber of Commerce, attended by a score of representatives of every prominent social organization in the city.

Headquarters in the disaster zone were established at the residence of Fred J. Byers, 911 Ridge avenue. Mr. Oliver announced the following in charge of committee work:

Edward A. Woods, chairman general disaster committee; George C. Schutte and F. R. Walton, canteen; S. E. Elliott and Charles S. Hamilton, temporary shelter and housing; Fred C. Schatz, transportation; Miss Elinor Hanson and Miss Mercedes Flower, rehabilitation.

DEATH AND RUIN IN TRAIL OF NORTH SIDE BLAST

MOBS RUSH TO RUINS

Hardly had the reverberation of the explosion which wrecked the giant gas tank died away, before great crowds started for the scene of the explosion.

Across the bridges and down through the lower North Side they came on foot and by automobile. The broken glass tinkled under feet and tires on the street. Women with white, fear-stricken faces whimpered but joined the pressing throngs.

At the north end of the Manchester Bridge a traffic jam for a time set the police at their wits' end. Ambulance bells clanged and the traffic snarl opened for an instant to let through the speeding cars from the hospitals. Turning sharply to the left they plunged down South avenue splashing through several feet of water which was draining from a big tank just east of the one which exploded.

Mounted police barred the way to the avenue, but there was no stopping the crowds working their way through the Baltimore and Ohio freight yards adjoining. They swarmed up on box cars like flies to get a good look at what was left of that tank.

The wreckage was a twisted mass of steel that reminded one of a vast spider's web partly brushed away. There was the sickening, sweetish smell of gas in the air.

Bells clanged. The ambulances were coming out bearing their freight of injured. "That makes five loads that I've counted," said one man. "There must be a lot more in there. A good many men work around one of those tanks."

Closer through the freight yard and out through the open, nearer to the blast scene where the police were struggling to hold back the crowd, it was almost impossible to keep them back. There was too much territory there to cover.

A sudden terror in the crowd did what the police could not do. A rumor passed from lip to lip that the other tank, nearer to them, was in danger. The leaders turned and fled and the panic spread. Men ran like sheep, girls screamed and one stumbling over a switch rail narrowly escaped being trampled by the crowd.

Large girders of twisted steel lay 500 yards from the scene of the explosion. Warped by the intense heat they had taken strange and horrible shapes.

Workmen in a shanty but two blocks away from the explosion escaped uninjured. They described the explosion as an immense pillar of flame which shot eastward for at least five blocks over lower Allegheny. Tumbling out of their shanty, they were conscious of the flame in the air for a second, and then it disappeared like a puff of smoke. It left behind a close, stifling heat which nearly strangled them.

City Frowned on New Gas Tank in 1923

Construction of large storage tanks for natural gas within the city limits was frowned on in 1923 by the City Planning Commission.

At that time Hugh N. Arthur, chief engineer of the City Planning Commission, said that the Equitable Gas Company wanted permission to build a tank holding between 10,000,000 and 12,000,000 cubic feet, or about twice as large as the present tanks.

"The commission questioned the advisability of building any more large tanks within the city," said Mr. Arthur. "I know that representatives of the company discussed the matter at the time. Permission for construction is a matter up to the building inspection department. But I distinctly recall that when this question came up the commission was engaged in preparing the zoning ordinance. The present ordinance excludes erection of large tanks in the city. It also provides that in the case of fire or accident a tank cannot be rebuilt if it has been more than 60 per cent destroyed."

Application for a permit to rebuild the tank would have to be made to H. L. Ley, superintendent of the Bureau of Building Inspection. Mr. Ley, it was announced at his office, would not be in today, as he left with a corps of inspectors immediately following the blast, to make an investigation of the cause of the explosion and to obtain all possible information.

and scenes in the doomed Manchester district.

CITY STUNNED

For five minutes after the explosion the population of Pittsburgh was stunned. Everywhere throughout the downtown section of the city were victims of broken windows, who ran bleeding through the streets. With glass on the pavements ground to dust under the feet of the fleeing people and dust and mortar falling from damaged walls, it was at first reported that the disaster had occurred in the heart of the city and crowds ran through the streets inquiring what had happened and where.

Then came the wild appeal for help from the scene of ruin and death. Calls to the police stations and hospitals were made in frantic cries for immediate aid. Scarcely had the echoes of the blast died away when several thousand persons streamed along Reedsdale, Wolfendale, Lacock and other streets in area of the explosion. Many were bleeding from ghastly wounds caused by flying glass. In the homes within half a mile of the tanks were many too badly hurt to flee. Standing at the broken windows they implored assistance from the mob that filled the streets.

DEATH

Under crumbled walls and in the wreckage of the giant gas retorts were others cold in death.

The cries of the wounded and the shouts of the fugitives were mingled with the clang of hurrying ambulances and fire apparatus. Police and firemen, rushing to the scene, met the fleeing, panic-stricken mobs and admonished those who were able to return and watch their homes. When the ambulances arrived they found many of those who escaped trying to give first aid to victims. Many weak from loss of blood had fallen to the sidewalks. They were carried to ambulances, and rushed to North Side hospitals.

Children in the Manchester district on their way to school were in the path of the blast and were showered with glass, broken bricks and twisted metal that fell among them like shrapnel, injuring scores of little ones and causing the others to stampede. Some ran to their homes and found only broken walls and their families groping with bloodstained faces seeking a means of escape. Mothers seeking their children soon filled the streets, and their pitiful calls for aid added to the scenes of sickening terror.

RESCUE BEGINS

At 9 a. m. the police had made some progress in restoring order. In 15 minutes the ambulances had arrived, physicians were saving scores of lives by fashioning hasty tourniquets and applying them to gashed limbs to prevent victims from bleeding to death, and the survivors in the wrecked gas house were bringing forth bodies of the dead.

Meantime, the news of the disaster had spread to all parts of the city and fleets of taxicabs were rushed to replace crowded ambulances. Owners of automobiles pressed their cars into service to aid the injured and the streets through the lower North Side became jammed with an almost inextricable traffic jam. Persons residing in the damaged area who had gone to work downtown rushed home, and within half an hour after the explosion the bridges were crowded with all manner of vehicles and thousands running breathlessly on foot.

Sightseers and the curious came in droves and the police lines were extended while traffic officers, patrolmen and mounted police pushed back the surging throng. Behind the officers was another mob of residents of the ruined homes, clamoring to get out, fearing another blast.

The first round of the ambulances took those lying helpless on sidewalks—particularly in the immediate vicinity of the gas works. Many seriously hurt, but able to walk, ignored their own hurts and assisted in caring for those who had been caught under falling walls or hit by flying debris.

Taxicabs and automobiles were then pressed into service, policemen, firemen and residents of the neighborhood assisting in gathering in the hundreds of maimed victims. These cars, bearing their freight of sufferers, with clanging bells, honking sirens and bellowing drivers, sped through the streets, and at the intersection of Galveston avenue met the mob that poured from the Manchester Bridge. The crowd was pushed back into Reedsdale street and the caravan of vehicles with their bleeding and groaning occupants rushed up the steep grade to Ridge avenue, where a crowd of timid spectators gazed down on the seething turmoil at the foot of the hill.

An hour later the explosion victims still were being rushed to the hospitals. Many occupants of the homes had been crushed underneath the gnarled furniture, broken mirrors and twisted partitions, and either crawled to windows and doorways or were found pinioned in the wreckage by rescuers.

Many who escaped or were only slightly hurt collapsed when they realized their good fortune in not being killed. Mothers searching for their children fainted or fell in the streets from sheer exhaustion.

More than 100 who had suffered bruises or lacerations were released from hospitals as soon as their injuries were dressed, and almost without exceptions they returned home on foot. A ghastly sight they made as they streamed down the hill from Ridge avenue, heads swathed with bloody bandages, arms in slings and faces wearing grotesque, red-stained masks of courtplaster.

These injured who returned were met by members of their families and friends who had been engaged in a frantic search for the missing. Wives threw their arms around their bandaged husbands and kissed faces that were scarcely visible under the pads of gauze.

Weather Instruments Recorded Explosion

"As if given a mighty push the Oliver Building swayed," Weather Forecaster W. S. Brotzman said in describing the effect of the North Side explosion on one of the loftiest downtown skyscrapers.

"I was seated at my desk," said the weather man, "when the blast occurred. There was a distinct sway, something like that caused by an earthquake.

"We found later that the barometer recorded the increased air pressure resulting. The air was so compressed by the violent concussion that its pressure became greater by five hundredths of an inch.

"I felt a slight tremor when the bomb exploded in the Farmers Bank Building last year, but this morning it was if the building was rocking."

Tragic Blast Grim Mockery Of "No-Accident" Month

"November: No Accident Month," by a tragic whim of fate, has become the time of one of the greatest disasters in Pittsburgh's history.

The mockery of the Safety Council's slogan was flaunted today on posters on street cars and taxicabs that rushed through the wreck-strewn streets—many of the cabs loaded with bleeding victims of the explosion bore the "no accident" proclamation on spare tires.

In many quarters were heard the suggestions that all organizations working for safety should immediately start a campaign against tolerating the menace of a gas plant in the heart of a densely-populated residence community.

SET UP FIRST AID STATION

A few minutes after the North Side explosion, nurses, internes and physicians from the Presbyterian, St. John's and Allegheny General hospitals, braving the chance of another blast and of falling walls and girders, established an emergency hospital in the wreck of the Pittsburgh Clay Pot Company, Reedsdale street. The string of litters and the line of injured who were able to walk made the building resemble the outside of a dressing station in a wrecked French town during the war.

Blast May Speed C. of C. Tourists' Return

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 14.—The news of the Equitable Gas tank explosion was a great shock to the members of the Chamber of Commerce party. It is expected that A. W. Robertson, president of the Philadelphia Company; Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works; P. J. Chesterton, vice president of the Bell Telephone Company, and several others will abandon the tour and return to Pittsburgh at once.

Favorite Coffee
3 lbs. for $1

The price alone is sufficient to make it interesting, but it's the quality of this popular blend that makes the opportunity sensational.

Excellent coffee grown on the uplands of Brazil. The flavor is "roasted in" right here in our own building. Packed daily—you receive it fresh from the roaster.

"Economy-Cut" Slicing Hams—
A New McCann Idea!

Shanks, lb. 23c
Untrimmed Slices, lb. 40c
Butt, lb. 23c

Heavy hams—larger than the average family would use—cost us less than small ones. This "economy cut" plan "reduces" their size to suit family needs.

Your choice of the shank, the butt or the center slices at prices that are almost ridiculous.

Serve ham your favorite way and remember that McCann's introduced this new money-saving method.

There's Garden Freshness in These Canoe Club Tomatoes—dozen cans, $1.55

My, but they're nice. An opened can reveals solid, bright-red tomatoes—most of them whole—with an absolute minimum of water. Their flavor is a demonstration of how scientifically they have been packed. You almost imagine they're fresh from the vine.

Long ago the sweater graduated from the class of "just something to wear." Now it is the costume of the world's smartest women during certain hours of the day. But nowhere is it smarter than right here at Pittsburgh's Fashion-First store. Every new weave, every subtly new stripe, every new stitch ... in softer woolen yarns, in rayon and silk. New necklines, new sleeves, new colorings ... and tailored ... well, there's the story, in their custom-like tailoring. All sizes. And right here ... the correct skirt to complement each sweater.

School Tots Heroic In Grim Tragedy

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

Little children are among the great heroes of the hideous gas explosion tragedy that has left Pittsburgh stunned and heartsick. For, in the face of what seemed like almost certain death, the children of several schools showed that they were of the stuff from which brave men and women are made.

Dr. Ben H. Graham, associate superintendent of schools, has paid them this tribute:

"If someone had told me little children could be so brave, orderly and sensible in the face of such a sudden disaster, I would not have believed them. But, I have seen for myself."

Dr. Graham visited several schools after the tragedy. He passed his hand over his eyes, turned to Miss Jane MacKenzie, principal of the Daniel Webster School at Reedsdale and Scotland streets, and smiled wanly:

"I expected to see dozens of mangled little bodies when I got here and when I went to Conroy. That there were no casualties and just a few scratches seems like a miracle almost too good to be true. The children saved themselves."

At Daniel Webster the windows are out, but there was no one injured. Miss Marion, a teacher at Conroy, was slightly cut from flying glass. The windows are wrecked, the plaster and picture frames a jumbled mass. At Allegheny High windows were broken, but only one child, Virginia Catalina, was harmed and she has a small cut on her leg that amounts to little.

Dr. Graham told of the children at Allegheny high:

"They filed out of the building in a line and went to the center of the park. They are usually much more noisy and disorderly when they go to their lunch or home at night. The teachers told me how easily they were to manage."

The good sense and obedience of the school children no doubt saved many injuries, if not lives. Instead of rushing to the windows those who were in the rooms went to the center. Those who were outside had been taught to get away from buildings when they heard a deafening roar and they did. It shows the splendid training the children of Pittsburgh schools have had in safety drills. They have had it drilled into them until they can't forget, even in the face of death.

Conroy School has been turned into an emergency hospital with Red Cross nurses and first aid workers helping care for the injured. Even the children themselves have volunteered to do what they can and every man, woman and child has forgotten his own troubles in service to the wounded and dying.

The tremendous force of the explosion is shown at the Snodgrass School, at the top of Duquesne Heights, where windows were shattered to bits.

ARMORED CAR UNIT URGED FOR CAVALRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Radical change in the cavalry of the United States Army to increase its efficiency are recommended in the annual report of Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, chief of cavalry. The recommendations include substitution of a semi-automatic rifle for the present Springfield rifle, and the addition of an armored car unit, a tank unit and an observation squadron of airplanes to the cavalry division.

EASY
Also furnished with gasoline motor, inter-changeable with electric motor.

The New Easy saves you Wringing the Clothes and Emptying the Water

In place of a wringer the New Easy Washer gives you a wonderful drying tub that dampdries an eight-sheet batch of clothes all at one time, ready to hang out, without broken buttons, without deep wrinkles squeezed in the clothes.

Two things are done at once, for while one batch is dampdried, another big batch is washed.

There are no pails of water to be emptied. The handy gas heater keeps the wash water hot, and an automatic starting and stopping switch protects your fuses. You never have seen a washer so safe, so convenient, so speedy, and so easy on the clothes and on you.

Phone today for a personal demonstration. Liberal monthly terms.

PIONEER HOMES FEEL CRUNCH OF BLAST

Famous old residences in the exclusive Ridge avenue district on the North Side were badly damaged by the terrific blast when the gas tank exploded today. Windows on the southern front of the palatial home of E. M. Byers, at Ridge and Galveston avenue, were blown in and furniture was broken. In the same block the residences of J. Frederick Byers, Henry Chalfant, the Rev. Dr. Maitland Alexander, John H. Ricketson, Jr., Mrs. Charles Gordon Zug and A. Marshall Bell likewise suffered.

East of Galveston avenue the damage was less, but the stone mansion long the residence of the late Henry W. Oliver did not escape. Windows were broken and the walls were shaken. Several old homes, now occupied by tenants or caretakers, were damaged and the windows of the dormitories of the Western Theological Seminary were shattered.

Homes of prominent residents damaged in the western section of Ridge avenue, in the direct path of the blast, are those of Oliver Ormsby Phillips, S. G. Ricketson, J. W. Dalzell and the Rev. Robert Christie. When the telephones went down in the lower section of the neighborhood there was a rush to the Ridge avenue district, where the residents allowed the use of their telephones and assisted in the calls for aid.

COUNTY'S HELP IS OFFERED

County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong arose from a sick bed to telephone authorization for the expenditure of whatever emergency funds are required to give relief in the North Side blast district. Coroner McGregor, the highest county official at the scene, was told to make whatever expenditures he deemed necessary.

At the same time, Commissioner Armstrong ordered Director Norman F. Brown, of the County Department of Public Works, to put all facilities of his department and all county equipment at the disposal of police and firemen to aid in relief work.

Window Washer, Blocks Away, Cut by Blast

One of the remote explosion casualties was Mrs. Frances Kopp, 29, of 2626 Penn avenue, cut on the face and arms while cleaning a window in Caruso Brothers' office in the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company Building, Twentieth and Smallman streets.

She was seated on a second floor window ledge, her feet inside the office, the lower sash pulled down on her knees as she polished the pane. The upper sash broke from the explosion and the glass showered her. She was treated at St. Francis Hospital and taken home. She says she can't remember how she raised the lower and crawled back into the office—instead of falling outside.

Saw Blinding Flash, Then Windows Caved In

Miss Ruth Pastre of R. F. D. 7, Bellevue, and Jerome Henkel of 12 Furley street, both of whom were injured, were looking directly at the great steel tank of the Equitable Gas Company from their place of employment, the William G. Johnston Printing Company plant in Ridge avenue, when the blast occurred this morning.

All they saw was a blinding flash of flame and they were knocked to the floor as windows caved in and the ceiling of the room in which they were working collapsed. They were rescued from a window and taken to the Presbyterian Hospital. Both suffered severe cuts and bruises.

Sent to Explosion Scene, He Finds Father Dead

Ray E. Michaels, Duquesne Light Company emergency man, almost stumbled over the body of his own father, C. F. Michaels, a compresser operator at the gas tank which exploded this morning. The son answered an emergency call to repair wrecked light wires. He glanced at a body lying on the sidewalk and the shoes looked familiar. He found it to be his father. He accompanied the body to the morgue and made the formal identification.

Doug Fairbanks, Jr., Writes Titles for Father's Newest Screen Drama, "The Gaucho"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 14.

SOME of the best of the titles in "The Gaucho" were written by young Douglas Fairbanks, who has a flair for writing as well as acting. After his father read the titles, he made out a check for $500 and handed it to Doug, Jr.

"You are my son," said Doug, Sr., "but those titles are as good as any that I have ever had written for me, and you needn't feel you haven't earned this money."

They tell a story about the two Fairbanks that is very amusing. They were dining at Pickfair, and after dinner Mary Pickford-Fairbanks asked the boy if he wouldn't do some of his imitations. He went through his repertoire, and as his piece de resistance, offered an imitation of his famous dad. Doug, Sr., didn't say much, but the story goes he cut out about 300 feet of himself in "The Gaucho" the next day, doing the very antics his son presented with so much histrionic ability.

Actors come and actors go, but Charlie Chase seems to continue to be a shining light at the Hal Roach studio. When any company signs an actor these days on a five-year contract, you know he has more than made good. That's what Hal Roach has done with Charlie Chase, and, under the terms of the new contract, he will have more to say about his stories and directors than in the past. His next is a two-reeler to be released by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. In the past the Chase comedies were circulated throughout the world by Pathe.

What a wealth of memories the name of Marguerite Snow brings to this writer. I remember seeing her first when she and Florence Labadie and James Cruze were visiting Chicago. They were then three of the most prominent stars in the film business. "The Million Dollar Mystery," a serial in which all three had a part, was patronized by every shop girl in the country. Then, Jimmie Cruze and Marguerite Snow seperated. Jimmie became a great director and Marguerite devoted her time to looking after her daughter. Florence Labadie was killed in an automobile accident. Now, Marguerite wires me that she is appearing in a vaudeville act here in Los Angeles, in a sketch staged for her by Neely Edwards. Here's hoping she has all the luck in the world.

I suppose, if one is facing death, it might be as well to face it with an archbishop and an undertaker. Marie Dressler, who had the closest call of her life when her car skidded on the wet pavement and collided with another car, found herself looking into the calm eyes of the Archbishop of Sweden, the occupant of the other skidding motor. With a sense of humor that didn't desert her even with a wrenched back, nerves that were taut and clothes awry, Marie looked into his face with a sweet smile and said, "Pleased to meet you." The undertaker, who was driving with his friend, the archbishop, said this was one time when he really didn't care to do any business.

Carmel Myers, who has been vacationing in New York with Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer and their daughters, is on her way home. Carmel surprised everybody out here by rumors that she was remaining in New York to return to the stage. A letter received denies this report, however. The Mayers are leaving New York in a few days, so it seems very likely that Miss Myers will come back at the same time.

I've always found, in my career, where there's a lot of smoke there's fire. That is why I believe that Eric Von Stroheim really is returning to Universal to make a picture, although everyone at Universal denies it vociferously. (Good $2 word, isn't it?)

At any rate, Von Stroheim, who is the world's wonder when it comes to using 10 times as much footage as necessary but who, in spite of this fault, nearly always makes a good picture, had the satisfaction of being called back to Paramount Famous Lasky to put together "The Wedding March," which had been taken apart and re-edited. He was also, 'tis said on excellent authority, been offered a picture at Universal.

Mr. Von Stroheim had his start with Universal and although when he left, things were not particularly amicable, he and Carl Laemmle have long ago patched up their troubles.

The power of the press and an expose of yellow journalism is promised by Allan Dwan in his next picture, "Headlines." Ben Hecht, who was a contemporary of mine way back in the Mid-Victorian age in Chicago, has furnished this masterpiece. Well, Ben knows his newspapers, I'll say that for him. Tom Geraghty, a former newspaper man, has been invited to write the scenario. He and Allan Dwan have taken themselves to Arrowhead Springs where they are working in peace and quiet. "Headlines" is a Robert Kane production. Bob is certainly turning them out since he came to California.

OPERETTA NEAR END OF RUN

Notwithstanding continued demand to see "My Maryland," the popular operetta enters its last week in Pittsburgh tonight. The final performance will be played Saturday night and from here the company moves on to Cincinnati prior to entering Chicago for what is planned as a long run.

This evening in the Pitt, "The Spider," mystery play by Fulton Oursler and Lowell Brentano, will be presented. It will have as its featured player William Courtenay, who acted the leading role in New York for months.

Tonight patrons of the Nixon will have the pleasure of again seeing Fred Stone and his daughter, Dorothy, in the musical comedy, "Criss Cross," with music by Jerome Kern. The company of 100 will include singers, dancers, players, acrobats and tumblers. Matinees will be Wednesday and Saturday.

Nan Halperin, songstress, is booked as the headline attraction in the Davis on the Keith-Albee variety program this week. Mrs. Wallace Reid will be seen in a dramatic playlet, "Evidence," and on the screen in her latest motion picture, "The Satin Woman."

George White's "Scandals" is the next attraction in the Alvin, opening Monday evening, November 21, with matinees Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving) and Saturday. The chief players are Ann Pennington, Willie and Eugene Howard, Tom Patricola, Harry Richman, Frances Williams, Williams Sisters, Buster West, John West and others. The sale of seats will begin Thursday morning.

FARRAR TO SING HERE TONIGHT

Geraldine Farrar is to give a concert in Carnegie Music Hall tonight. Miss Farrar has not sung here in two seasons and her program includes songs by Haendel, Beethoven, Gluck, Schumann, Schubert, Franz, Mozart, Massenet, Godard, Rubinstein, Grieg, Brahms and Gretchaninoff. Claude Gonvierre will accompany Miss Farrar and also contribute a group of piano solo numbers. This is one of the events of the May Beegle series of concerts.

Lawrence Tibbett, young American baritone, who won success in the Metropolitan two seasons ago, will be heard for the first time in Pittsburgh Thursday night, November 17, in the third concert in the May Beegle series. Mr. Tibbett's program will include the Prologue from "Pagliacci," in which opera he scored. Edward Harris, former Pittsburgh musician, will be Mr. Tibbett's assisting artist. He will play two of his own piano compositions, "Croon," a Southland idyll, and "Noel," from Christmas Suite.

CABLE KEEPS AUTO FROM GOING OVER PRECIPICE

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Nov. 14.—The auto of William P. O'Toole, of Trotter, cut off six posts along the highway on Limestone Hill, but the steel cable held his car from going down a 40-foot precipice.

Puts Rheumatics on Their Feet

Wonderful Effect of Nurito that Actually Enables the Helpless to Go Back to Work.

DRUGGISTS GUARANTEE IT

Rheumatic sufferers are certainly going wild with joy at the discovery of Nurito. For the first time they have found something they can absolutely depend upon to rid them of the pain of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia or neuritis. And to make it more emphatic, if it doesn't drive away the worst pain with two or three doses the druggist will refund your money. A New York specialist was finally induced to put up his famous prescription as a great public benefit. It works like a charm, fast and powerful, but harmless even to children, no opiates or other narcotics. By all means make a trial of this remarkable prescription that gets the helpless out of bed, sends them back to work, happy and free.

Nurito is now sold in the drug stores and is the greatest blessing yet discovered for those tortured with pains of rheumatism. Try it today. Don't wait. At all drug stores and McCulloch's drug stores.

CHIEF DESCRIBES HOW BLAST LOOKED

A vivid description of the blast was given by Fire Chief Richard L. Smith, who was driving across the Manchester Bridge in full view of the explosion scene at the time the explosion occurred.

"The great steel tank rose hundreds of feet into the air like a great balloon on the crest of a block-wide burst of flame. It remained intact for an instant and then burst like a great fireworks bomb," he said.

"As it burst with a terrific roar the hundreds of tons of steel went hurtling through the air as so much pasteboard and then the crash of buildings and glass filled the air." Chief Smith was the first of a hundred city, state and county officials to reach the scene.

STORE CANCELS DEBTS AS BLAST DESTROYS HOMES

As soon as the extent of the disaster became known, Leo Lehman, general manager of the May-Stern Company, announced that his company will cancel all debts owed by persons whose property was wiped out due to the explosion. Persons who suffered substantial loss, Mr. Lehman said, will be given "liberal extensions on payment. Proper investigation will be made to insure fair dealing."

A Message to Underweight Men and Women

The one supremely good health-building tonic that is also the one great weight producer known to modern science the country over is McCoy's Tablets.

They build flesh where flesh is needed—sunken cheeks, neck and chest—and many a man and woman, skinny and scrawny, have thanked McCoy's after a few weeks' treatment for the decided improvement in looks and figure.

Many times the increase in weight is astonishing—one exceedingly thin woman gained 10 pounds in 22 days.

McCoy takes all the risk—Read this ironclad guarantee. If after taking 4 sixty-cent boxes of McCoy's Tablets or 2 one-dollar boxes any thin, underweight man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds and feel completely satisfied with the marked improvement in health—your druggist is authorized to return the purchase price.

The name McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets has been shortened—just ask for McCoy's Tablets at May's Drug Stores or any drug store in America.

Clover as Weather Indicator

CLOVER is one of the common plants which are said to foretell the weather. Its leaves feel rough when a storm is approaching and it contracts its leaves during rain.

IT NEVER PAYS

By GILBERT ROGERS

Margie Finds Jerry Sick; With Arrest Facing Her She Plays the Nurse

HE WAS talking in little mutters that she could scarcely make out. Once or twice she heard her name. What was it he was saying? In a hopeless chaos, he was crowding together thoughts and memories and wishes, in one second living again in South America, in another back in Newport on his dingy boat.

"Why, the water's not cold, Margie!" he said once. "Come on!"

Then he shivered and laughed.

Margie looked around her . . . if she only had a hot water bag. These alternate burnings and chills—there must be something that would help. She'd buy a hot water bag anyway. Buy—how could she? Not a penny in her purse. Well, she would pawn her mesh bag. It was silver. She'd go out as soon as the places were open.

With the light Jerry fell into an uneasy sleep again. Margie went down the stairs. On the lower floor a door snapped open, and a fat, red-faced woman stepped out in the corridor.

"Where are you coming from?" she demanded.

"From—from Mr. Eversham's room," Margie faltered.

"Well, you got a nerve with you all right. This place is respectable—and you can get out and stay out."

"You don't understand," said Margie. "He's sick. I'm trying to take care of him."

"Yes, and you're his aunt, ain't you? There's the door!"

Margie knew the red-faced woman would lock it behind her.

"I'm not going," she said quietly.

"Oh, you're not?" The red-faced woman looked at her slowly and smiled to herself. "We'll see about that. I'll have a cop put you out! And right now."

She brushed past Margie, and stepped out into the street.

Margie went upstairs again slowly. She opened the door of Jerry's room and sat down, waiting, frightened.

CHAPTER XXXV.

SHE did not have long to wait. She had no plea, nothing except her will not to leave Jerry, not to desert him. Then there was a heavy footstep outside, and the rickety door that had no lock was pushed open.

The red-faced woman stood there, pointing. "There she is. That's her!"

A policeman, as red-faced as the woman, stepped into the room.

"Come on now," he growled. "Step lively. Do you want to get pinched."

Margie was on her feet. "Oh, you can arrest me, do anything only let me stay here. He's sick—he may die—I've got to take care of him. Don't you see? And I'm not doing any harm."

The policeman had bright blue eyes. He stared at her, then glanced at the cot where Jerry lay, white and haggard.

"How long has she been here," he asked the housekeeper.

"All night, I guess. This is the first time I ever see her. She ought to be locked up, that's what she ought to be. Comin' into a respectable house . . . ."

A fury seemed to catch Margie. "I'm not going," she stormed. "You can't make me go. I'll—I'll stay where I am. He's sick—do you think I'm going to leave him to—to die!"

"What's your name?" the policeman demanded. His voice had grown heavier and angrier than ever.

"Margie Marsh."

"You're Irish."

"I'm not."

"Don't argue with me. It only proves you're Irish. If I say you're Irish you're Irish, and that settles it. Now what do you do?"

"I—I—"

"Sure, that's it, you're a trained nurse. I guess a trained nurse has got a perfect right to come in here where there's someone sick." He growled deeper than before, but this time it was at the housekeeper.

"What?" she exclaimed.

"You heard me!"

She put her hands on her hips. "Oh, so that's it. Maybe, I won't call up headquarters, maybe I won't . . ."

"Listen!" The policeman pointed impressively to a small two-burner gas stove in the corner. "You know the tenement house law about stoves, don't you? Now, how would you like for me to report that and have you fined . . . Well, you just bother this girl any, and I'll report it before you know what's happened. See? Now you better leave her alone."

The door closed on both of them, and Margie sank back, breathing hard. The world wasn't such an unfair place after all. So she was Irish, was she? And she smiled a little.

She did not see the housekeeper again, though somewhat fearfully she looked for her when she went down a few minutes later.

Across the counter of a pawnshop she pushed her purse.

"How much?"

"Eight dollars."

It was shoved back to her wordlessly, contemptuously.

"Well—well let me have half of that, then."

"Listen, lady, I'll give you two."

"All right. All right."

From the remaining change after her purchase of a hot water bag, she bought a loaf of bread and a bottle of milk and carried them back to the room.

She put the hot water bag at Jerry's feet, and saw to it that he swallowed some of the medicine the doctor had prescribed. She wondered why she was not tired. It was as if an unnatural strength had come to her. Sleep, food—nothing mattered. She could go on so long as she could help Jerry.

That afternoon he slept longer, but in the night he was restless, delirious again. Margie slept fitfully in the Morris chair, waking up to wonder where she was, waking up to peer at Jerry in the dimness of the shaded light. He was getting better, she knew somehow with the instinct that her love had given her, that he was getting better.

He was still quieter in the morning, and the fresh air blew through the little room, that was so neat now, so clean and pleasant.

But he muttered still in his fever, and still opened his glazed, unseeing eyes at her.

"Now, there's this about Mabel," he murmured, "Mabel's the kind that—that everybody likes. She's good, too. But I

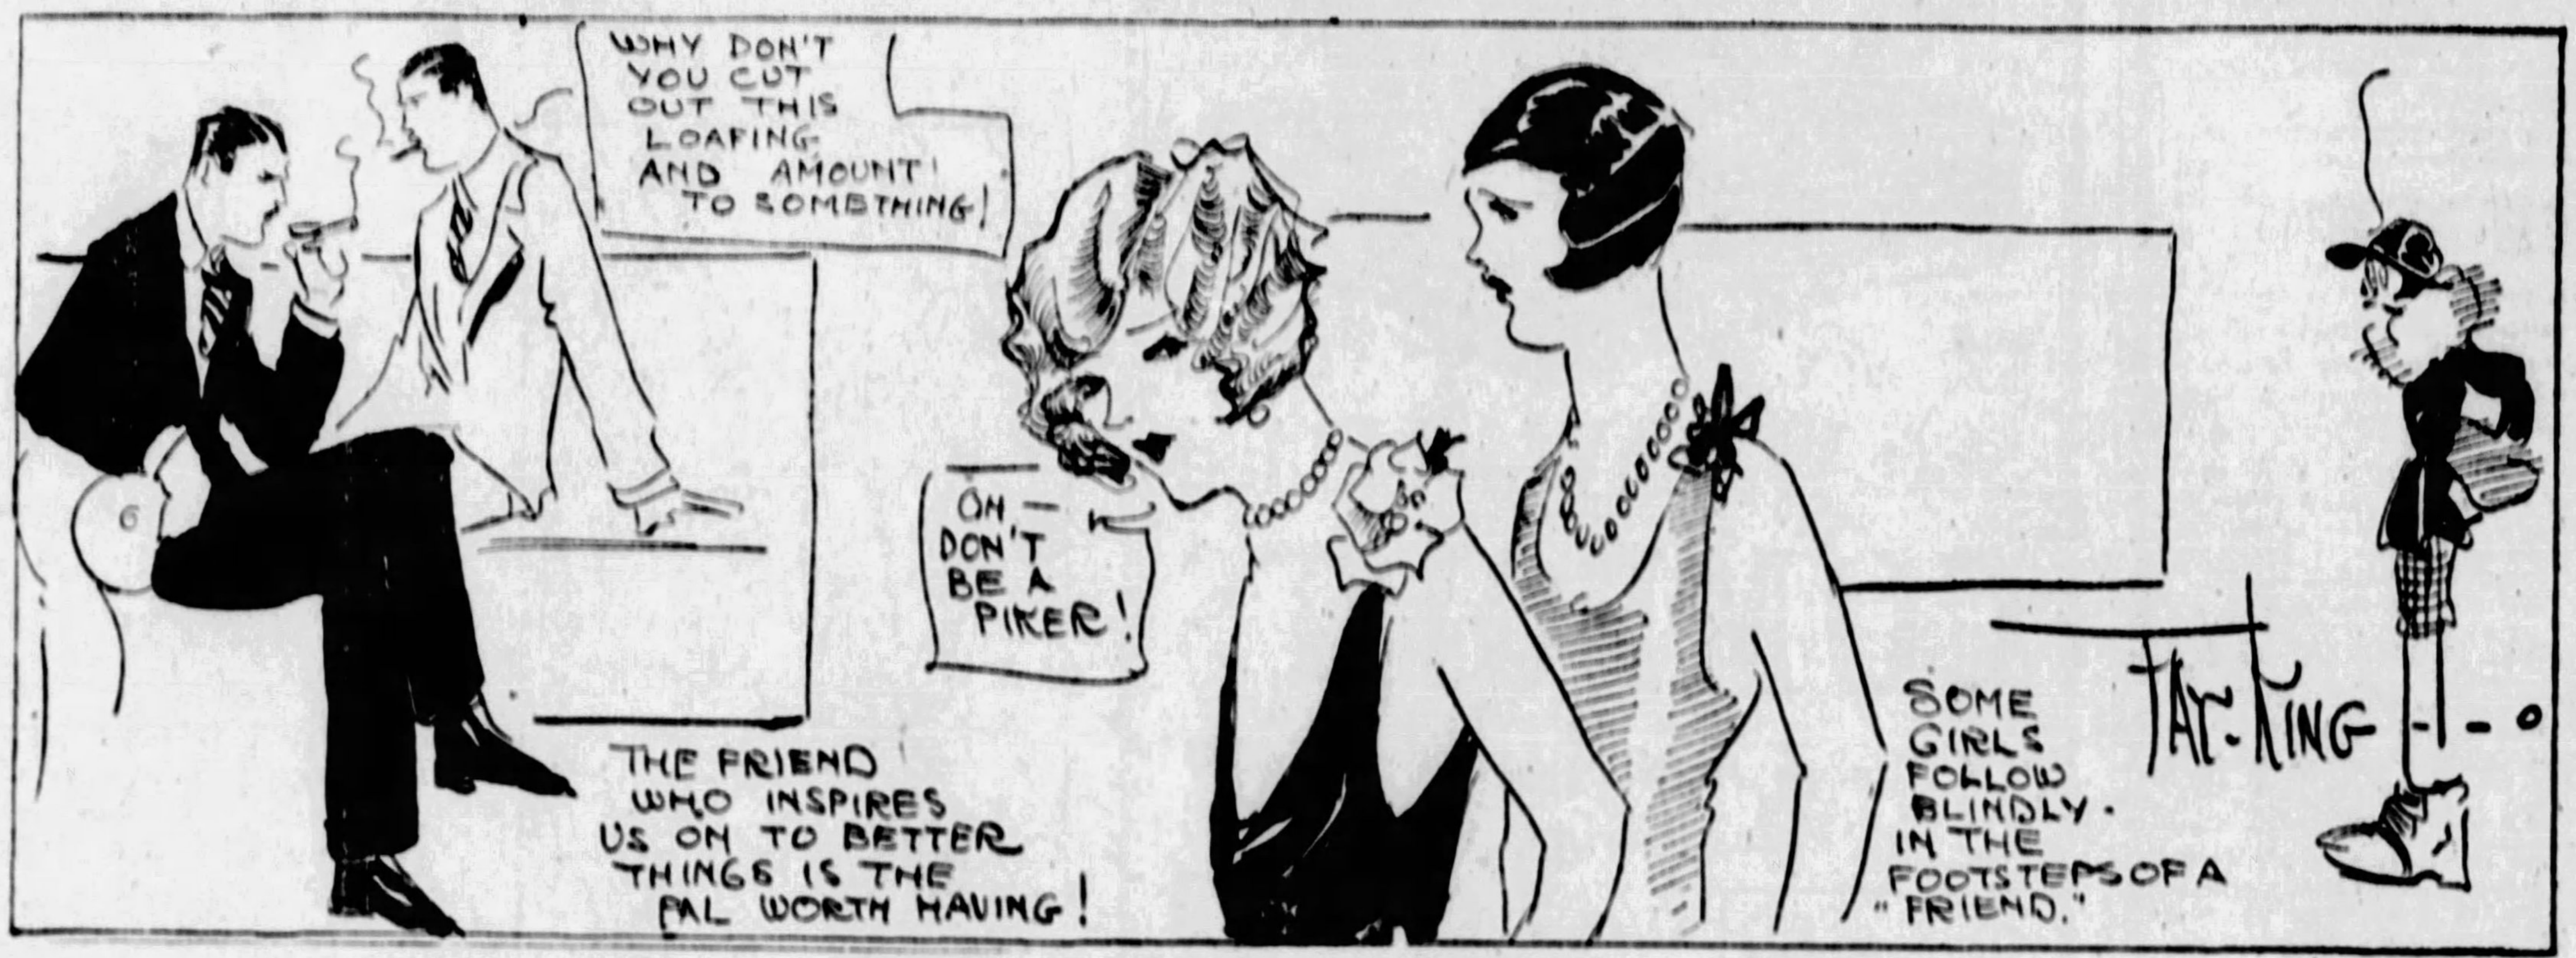
Fay King Tells Why Friendship Is Priceless



WHY DON'T YOU CUT OUT THIS LOAFING AND AMOUNT TO SOMETHING!
OH— DON'T BE A PIKER!
THE FRIEND WHO INSPIRES US ON TO BETTER THINGS IS THE PAL WORTH HAVING!
SOME GIRLS FOLLOW BLINDLY IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF A "FRIEND."
FAY-KING -I-o

By FAY KING.

FRIENDSHIP is the most beautiful thing in the world.

Friendship is not a rare thing dependent upon riches and power. It is a common sweetness that can exist in the humblest surroundings.

Whether we see two dear old codgers trotting along together on their evening walk with their pipes or whether we see two young friends jaunting along briskly, it is always a pleasant sight.

We see someone waiting on a corner, and though thousands pass the glad light comes into their eyes only when they see the familiar face of their friend appear among that sea of faces.

True friendship is founded upon mutual interests. Hours fly so quickly and pleasantly.

A friend is that one who, when we part, leaves only happy restful thoughts.

When we regret things we have said or done, that person is not a real friend. When we find ourselves influenced against our better judgment, irritable and disturbed, that person is not one we should cultivate further as a friend.

A true friend is restful, inspiring, honest and respectful of our opinions and ideals. He does not rule and drive us into regretful ways.

In minor things we may argue or disagree, but it is always in a pleasant, friendly way.

Our real friends want to see us improve.

It is always inspiring to see two happy kindred souls together, whether they be in a humble walk of life or in the high places.

Real friendship comes from the heart. It is life's greatest treasure. It abounds in mutual affection and regard.

For the Lovelorn

Lonesome and Heartbroken

DEAR MISS GALE:

Please may I write? I've simply got to have someone to tell my troubles to. The thought of writing to you saved me from jumping in the river, just about. If I could only get away from this mean old world. Can you tell me, is there anything worse than not to have a soul to love you? I'm quite sure there isn't. If you have no one to love you, you have nothing. I go to school in the morning, study hard all day and come home in the evening to find no peace. I have no father. My mother is yet young and goes out quite often in the evenings. So you see that leaves me alone a lot. It seems I have had nothing but hard luck all my life. My first two years of school I was always sick, got everything that came along, until after an operation, and have been o. k. But all the girls and boys my own age got two years ahead of me. Of course, that left me in a class with girls younger than myself. I am very small and don't look any older than the other freshmen. But I have much older ideas and ways which makes it hard for me to get along with them. Those in the upper classes will have nothing to do with me and I won't go with freshman girls. What am I to do, Miss Gale, sit at home every evening? Would you advise me to go clear through high school? I hate to think of doing so. I am considered good looking, have the clothes and know how to wear them. But I am very quiet, bashful and slow to make friends. Gosh, I'd give anything to have a real honest-to-goodness girl friend. One who is nice, my age and neat. I wouldn't care what she looked like. I don't think looks always count. Miss Gale, if you can say anything to cheer me up I certainly will appreciate it. I'd like your readers to say what they can, too.

LONESOME AND HEART-BROKEN.

Certainly I would strongly advise you to go through high school. Make friends with the girls in your class, my dear, even if they are a little younger. Two years is not too much difference in ages, you know, and you would be much happier to find friendship where you can rather than struggle after it among girls who apparently do not want it.

E Pluribus Unum

DEAR MISS GALE:

Your letters often help me in my own troubles. One question causes me much doubt. I am 17 and a senior in high school. I do not keep steady company as I do not feel old enough yet. You agree with me on that fact, I believe. One fellow comes to see me, four years my senior, but once a week. What time should he leave my place? Could you suggest some kind of entertainment at home, other than dancing for just a young girl and her boy friend? If a girl lets only one fellow kiss her, and no one else, do you think it is wrong? Hoping you will have the kindness to publish my inquiry and that some of the members of the column will express their opinion also on the last question I have asked you. I remain, of your readers, just

E. PLURIBUS UNUM.

Eleven o'clock is late enough for the boy to remain, my dear. Don't let him kiss you unless you are engaged.

Lucy

DEAR MISS GALE:

I want advice. I am in love with a boy and he told me he loves me. But I can't believe him. When he sees me he says "Hello" to me. I go to shows and I always see him there. If he sees me he comes and sits by me. He will talk to me and then he takes my hand. Should I let him do this? Please tell me. He smokes and sometimes he swears. I told him if he does that again I wasn't going to talk to him. Should he do that? He tells my girl friend I am his girl. They say he is going around telling things about me. Oh, Miss Gale, what shall I do? I love him. One day he asked me if I loved him and I told him to shut up. I want your advice. One time he kissed me and I told him not to do that again and he got sore at me. Was I doing right? How old do you think a girl should be to go out with fellow? He asked me for a date and I told him I was not allowed to have dates with boys, and he didn't talk to me for about two days. Oh, Miss Gale, I don't know what to do. He wrote me a note once and I answered it. Was it right for me to do that? I love him and he told me he loves me. Hoping to see this letter in the paper very soon, I wish you luck and happiness. He talks to me now.

LUCY.

If he doesn't take you to the show why permit him to sit beside you every time? Don't let him hold your hand. It doesn't seem to me that he is very much worth while if he talks about you and discusses love so casually.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, and emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

This is no secret: grass stains will come out!

A DIRTY, green stain is hard to get off, especially when you have to use hard water. The soap mixes with the hardness in hard water, and instead of suds, there's scum. A dirty ring around the edge of the basin. How can you clean clothes in such water?

But make the water soft with Melo. The scum will go quickly; the suds will come quickly. Grass stains, as green and dirty as you please, can't resist soft water. Get a can of Melo today at your grocer's.

CAN YOU IMAGINE Mother Nature Rolling a Sugar Coated Pill?

Nature doesn't do business that way. She is the great physician, and her remedies are sure, gentle and thorough. For constipation, the source of wide-spread suffering, she provides natural and speedy relief with Pluto Water, bottled at French Lick Springs.

Water is nature's great cleansing agent. Pluto Water, with its mineral content, literally "washes away" the accumulated waste. The action is pleasant and prompt, relief coming within from 30 minutes to 2 hours after drinking. There is no griping, no habit-forming tendency.

Read the opinion of a national health authority, given here, as to the danger in the use of drastic drugs in attempting to correct or cure constipation. The delicate tissues inside the body become seriously injured by contact with powerful chemicals and drugs. Play safe—take Pluto Water, recommended by physicians for nearly a generation.

Bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana. Pluto Water is sold at all drug counters and at fountains.

Philadelphia, Pa.
May 12, 1927

I travel a great deal, and find that irregular hours together with constant change of food tend to constipate. For that reason, I always carry a bottle of Pluto with me. I don't believe there is another laxative on the market that gives such quick relief. Often I find it convenient to drink Pluto at soda fountains.

L. Lamberton

ROYAL S. COPELA[illegible], M. D.
U. S. Senator from New York and formerly Health Commissioner of the City of New York

Dr. Copeland says: "Mineral waters of the right sort are preferable to many of the cathartic compounds on the market. Their power to overcome the immediate effects of constipation is unquestioned. They are soothing and healing to the tissues. Sugar coated pills are pleasant to take which may add to their danger. That is the reason they are coated with sugar. They are no less drastic and habit-forming because they appeal to the taste. Mineral waters pass through the system, doing nothing else but to flush and cleanse the intestinal tract."

DROWNS SAVING HIS BROTHER

By Universal Service.

KEY WEST, Fla., Nov. 14.—Reginald Knowles, 15-year-old Boy Scout, saved the life of his brother, Everett Knowles, 13, but was drowned himself before he could be rescued. The boys were fishing from a small boat when Everett fell into the water. Knowing his brother could not swim, Reginald leaped after him and kept him above water until Charles Demeritt, 17, came to his assistance. Reginald was drowned while his brother was being taken to the boat.

ERIE IS ABLE -:- TO TAKE OR LEAVE -:- ITS "OPEN" SUNDAY

HARDLY OVERRUN

Professional football is practically unknown in Erie, but during the summer this municipal athletic field is jammed every Sunday with baseball fans. There are no restrictions on the use of the grounds on Sunday and fair weather brings out the city's youth to participate in and watch an occasional sandlot game. The photo gives an idea of the extent of interest in a game yesterday between teams chosen among a crowd of young "blue law" violators.

PLATFORM OPEN

Sheriff Tom Sterrett (left) and Mayor oJseph C. Williams, both of whom favor Sunday movies and sport in Erie. Sterrett was elected sheriff on the Democratic ticket on an avowed wet program and a declaration he would not interfere with Sunday recreation.

NO RUSH ON THEATERS

The movies are open in Erie Sunday afternoon and night, but no attendance records are broken, neither is there anything unusual about the type of people who patronize the Sunday theater. Above is shown one of Erie's popular motion picture houses with the usual Sunday afternoon crowd going in. Managers say fewer people attend Sunday than Saturday. They also declare that there is never any cause for complaint about the behavior of children.

ERIE IS NOT "WILD" VILLAGE

WIDE OPEN CITY IS QUIET ON SUNDAYS

By ALBERT GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent of the Sun-Telegraph.

ERIE, Nov. 14—This ultra-modern city, the only community in the state of Pennsylvania which flouts the Sunday "blue laws" and gets away with it, is apt to be somewhat of a surprise to those who come here expecting to find a "wild" village.

In fact, it is so quiet that one might not know that such a thing as a movie is open Sundays unless he is a close observer or someone tells him. And as far as outdoor sports are concerned, at this time of the year, at least, one might think that football had never been heard of around here. There is practically no interest displayed in professional grid contests, but there are a few of the city's youths who go in for an occasional scrimmage on the Municipal Athletic Field once in a while on Sundays.

Baseball, however, is another matter and there is no secret about the community's interest in the national pastime Sundays or any other day of the week and the diamonds are thronged with interested spectators every Sunday if it doesn't rain, from Decoration to Labor Day.

HOW THEY GET AWAY WITH IT

And now one may ask, "How do they get away with it?" or, "Why do the authorities permit this flaunting of the laws of our state?" Both questions are answered by Sheriff Tom Sterrett, who harks back to a remark made some 40 years by State Justice Emory A. Walling, who at that time was a county judge.

"A law which the majority of people do not favor is not a law," the Judge is quoted as having declared, and Sheriff Sterrett, who was elected on an avowed wet platform and a declaration that he would not interfere with Sunday movies unless he was forced to, says he will not attempt to enforce the "blue laws" unless he receives formal complaint against Sunday recreation.

Among the ministers there are some who object to an "open" Sunday; some are in favor of it and still others prefer to remain neutral in the matter.

The most vehement denouncement of Sunday movies was expressed by the Rev. Dr. Walter H. Smith, pastor of the First Methodist Church, who boasts of a congregation of 1,800 in the heart of the city. He declared:

"The moving picture allowed to run on Sunday is an unmitigated curse. I know of nothing else in modern life that tends so swiftly and so surely to break down the spiritual life of the people. The difficulties experienced in modern church work are increased tenfold by this particular form of a commercialized Sabbath. I have made a special study of this question in all of the big cities of Europe and I am positive that the moral and spiritual bankruptcy of that war-continent is due in a very large measure to the wide-open commercialized Sabbath.

"If the continental Sunday comes into vogue here in America the spiritual life of the people will be undermined and America will go the way of war-cursed Europe."

Dr. Smith said he believes in and heartily patronizes every form of legal and moral recreation, but cannot sanction anything contrary to the laws of the state and nation.

Expressing an entirely opposite opinion in the matter is the Right Rev. Mgr. Peter M. Cauley, vicar of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church.

APPROVES OF MOVIES

"Good movies and good, clean sport promotes clean morals," he says. "You can't drive people to church with a policeman's club and if the doctrines of Christianity could be enforced along with morality, Christ would have followed this plan instead of the methods of teaching he used.

"Love of God and church must be inculcated in the minds of the people. If people think more of the movies than they do of church closing the movie houses won't help a bit. The love for God is the power behind the church."

Even Mayor Joseph C. Williams looks upon Sunday recreation with a favorable eye.

"I don't think the people of Erie want an observance of Sunday 'Blue laws,'" he assured. "At least there has never been anything said about it during my four years in office, nor as long as I can remember and I was born and raised in Erie.

"Let's go out and see for ourselves what harm the movie might be doing," he suggested in most unofficial tones.

While walking down Seventh street towards one of the most popular of Erie's movie palaces in State street, the Mayor divined some of his personal reasons for favoring Sunday movies.

"I have a daughter just turned 21 and I'd do anything in the world for her. I would much rather have her in a movie than joy-riding in an automobile around the country."

A little later he assured that he liked baseball games and "once in a while take in a Sunday contest after spending the morning in church with my wife and daughter."

The Mayor led the way to four moving picture houses in the heart of the city. All were patronized by intelligent looking people. There were parents with children; young couples, middle-aged couples and a number of young boys and girls. In one theater particularly where a picture of rather serious vein was being shown, baldpates were in abundance.

"Look at these people. Do you think their morals are being corrupted by spending a quiet afternoon here instead of sitting in on a 'little game' or sitting around in a hotel lobby? Most of these are traveling men who come here in preference to putting up in some other town where there is no Sunday recreation," he explained.

EVERYTHING ORDERLY

There were no unusually large crowds and everything was being done in the most orderly and respectable manner.

Sheriff Sterrett was another champion of the "open" Sunday. He cited an open letter addressed to his opponent in the county election in which he assured the voters he would not interfere with Sunday recreation and avowed himself a "wet." He points out that he had lost the Republican nomination by a small majority but had received enough support to place his name on the Democratic ticket. Although Erie county is overwhelmingly Republican, he pointed out, he won by a large majority when his opponent failed to reply to his "wide-open" challenge.

Interviews with three other leading ministers of the city disclosed that one was in favor of movies and kindred Sunday recreation; one opposed them, on the grounds that they were violating the law and the other expressed himself as being neutral.

The Rev. Dr. Harry Burton Boyd, pastor of the Park Presbyterian Church, said:

"Laws on the statute books should be enforced by the officers of the city, county and state. When officers elected to enforce law express contempt for law, either by word or action, they weaken the whole enforcement program.

"By neglect of law the moral fibre of the community is weakened. The Sunday laws of Pennsylvania have behind them the conscience of the state. They have been interpreted and upheld by the highest court in the commonwealth. No city has the right to ignore them. No law enforcement officer is true to his oath of office when he refuses to enforce them.

"Nullification is a dangerous doctrine in a democracy. Officials who practice the nullification of the law are a menace to free institutions."

URGES CHANGE IN LAWS

Rabbi Max C. Currick, a leader among the Jewish population, said he favored Sunday movies and sports. "Law ought to be obeyed," he said, "but these 'blue' laws ought to be changed. Working people are entitled to have recreation on Sunday and religious institutions should stand on their own and convincing their followings of their need of the church and God."

The Rev. M. V. McLean, chairman of the public morals committee of the Ministerial Association of Erie, declared movies and sports did not interest the people of his congregation. He is pastor of the Wayne Methodist Church.

"My people are opposed to public dances, card parties and all these kind of things, so they are not interested in Sunday movies," he said. "Of course, as to law violation, I think that is wrong. The law should be upheld, but I prefer to remain neutral."

Jail for Agent Who Dropped Gun at Trial

By Associated Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 14—Because he dropped a loaded pistol on the courtroom floor during the trial at which he was acquitted of murdering Bill Tilghman, noted frontier peace officer, Wiley Lynn, former Federal prohibition agent, must spend 30 days in jail.

The Oklahoma Criminal Court of Appeals today affirmed the sentence for contempt imposed by District Judge Frank Mathews more than two years ago. Lynn's chief counsel pleaded in vain at the time that he had instructed his client to bring the gun to court because it might be needed as evidence. The weapon was not discharged, but Judge Mathews severely arraigned the defendant for coming into court armed.

The death toll was highest here. Others were caught by falling walls of their homes.

Coroner William J. McGregor and deputies were soon on the scene investigating the cause and extent of the blast, while Mayor Kline and City Council were preparing to probe the disaster.

A blunder by someone in ordering workmen to repair the largest of three tanks while it was at least partly filled with gas, is believed responsible for the disaster.

The men, employed by the Riter-Conley company, builders of the tank, were working at the top evidently to close a leak, by use of the blow-torch, when the huge basin which stood 75 feet above the ground, was blown apart and a great sheet of flame shot a thousand feet upward.

Bodies of the two workmen were carried 75 feet against the side of a building.

SECOND TANK BURNS

A second tank holding 4,000,000 cubic feet of gas, and situated about 200 feet away, was crushed in. Its contents ignited and a second mighty blaze went up with a detonation that echoed the blast of the first.

A third tank, several hundred feet distant, of 500,000 cubic feet capacity and partly filled, was burst asunder by the force of the explosion, and its contents added to the vast breath of flame that could be seen for miles.

BUILDINGS CRUSHED

Six buildings of the Union Paint Company were crushed like an eggshell by the blast. The walls were blown in and the roofs of the entire group of structures fell, imprisoning workmen under the debris.

Tenements along Reedsdale street were virtually demolished. Walls buckled, roofs fell in and windows with frames were blown from their fastenings.

Many women and children in these tenements were killed or injured.

FIREMMEN TURN TO RESCUE

City firemen, on reaching the scene, seeing that fighting the flames of the smoldering ruins of the gas plant was useless, turned their fire fighting apparatus into life saving equipment. They ran up their ladders to tenement windows and carried down injured occupants, then commandeered automobiles and other vehicles to carry the injured to hospitals.

Within a short time the Presbyterian Hospital was jammed with injured. They were taken there as the nearest aid point to the scene. Emergency wards were set up in the halls. Some were placed on the floor, a reminder of field hospital scenes on a battlefield.

Soon the capacity of this hospital was overtaxed and injured were taken to the Allegheny General, St. John's, on the North Side, and Mercy, Passavant and St. Francis in the city proper.

Policemen were stationed on the running boards of automobiles to clear traffic for the machines bearing the injured.

Eye-witnesses said that after the first explosion a ball of fire sailed into the air several hundred feet and burst with a deafening roar. Houses caved in, streets were ripped up and telephone and electric wires torn down. Water pipes, buried deep in streets, were ripped out.

Several blocks away 200 school children were standing in the schoolyard, ready to enter the building. Practically every window in the school was shattered and many of the pupils were cut by flying glass.

Flooded streets, strewn with wreckage, hampered the work of the police and firemen. Their task was made more hazardous by the dangling electric wires, but finally the current was turned off and they entered the district.

One hundred trained workers of the John Eichleay, Jr. Company were ordered to the scene to assist in rescuing victims from demolished buildings.

The gigantic flash of flame which marked the blast could be seen for miles and appeared to flash higher than the brow of Mt. Washington. The concussion broke thousands of windows in the downtown district and knocked persons from their feet.

The property damage will be many millions, it is estimated.

When the extent of the disaster became apparent, the police commandeered private automobiles and trucks to convey injured to hospitals. Within an hour after the blast the three big hospitals on the North Side were reported crowded with victims. Many of the victims, bleeding from cuts and other injuries, staggered to the Allegheny General and Presbyterian hospitals. Some collapsed on the steps and were carried inside by nurses and doctors.

Fire company trucks, police patrol, taxicabs and commandeered automobiles were used to convey victims of the blast to the hospitals.

Telephones being useless, physicians concentrated at the hospitals to give first aid.

The huge tank with its steel framework was ripped asunder, sections of the steel supports being hurled many blocks.

A general alarm of fire summoned firemen, police and ambulances. They found it difficult to fight their way into the immediate region of the explosion, but one glimpse of the thickly settled district showed that many buildings were wrecked. The first injured were picked up from streets adjacent to the scene. They had been struck by flying debris.

The demand on the telephone system was so great that this means of communication was blocked.

Sweeping upward to Duquesne Heights, the force of the blast wrecked several buildings there and broke hundreds of windows.

Practically every person in the downtown district stood rooted for a period of a minute as the terrific blast shook the entire city.

As far away as Beltzhoover in the South Side windows were broken in homes and residents were in a state of fear from their ignorance of the explosion.

The blaze that followed the blast shot high into the air above the city's sky line and left clouds of smoke in its trail.

Hundreds of display windows in department stores, banks and commercial houses were shattered as the blast shook the city. In Fifth avenue, crowded with early shoppers, glass literally splashed into the streets and several persons were reported cut by the flying missiles, although not seriously.

In the Bessemer Building, Sixth street and Duquesne way, windows in countless office buildings crashed down into Sixth street in a furious crescendo that sent scared pedestrians stumbling for protection.

Water mains in the district were ripped open and spouted streams of water, which flooded Reedsdale and intersecting streets.

Charged wires dropped into the water and made the work of firemen dangerous.

Almost every passenger in a street car a block away at the time the blast occurred, was injured and the car nearly derailed.

School children on the way to classes were among the injured victims.

Pieces of the tank weighing as much as 300 pounds were hurled through buildings as far as half a mile from the scene.

Homestead, West Homestead and surrounding territory quaked under the force of the explosion.

The blast seemed close at hand. Hundreds of wives and mothers were terror stricken, thinking that there had been an explosion at the Homestead work of the Carnegie Steel Company and that loved ones had been killed or injured.

Many rushed into the streets and were with difficulty persuaded that the scene of the blast was seven miles distant.

Edward Keeler, superintendent of the wrecked gas plant, was one of those injured. After being given first aid at one of the emergency hospitals, however, he assisted in the rescue work.

Large plants in the immediate vicinity of the plant which were demolished included the Union Paint Company plant, the Standard Plate Glass Company warehouse, the Warren-Herrent Roofing Company warehouse.

Within a half hour after the explosion three investigations were under way. Coroner W. J. McGregor went to the scene with a force of deputies before any of the dead had been recovered and began an investigation. Fire Chief Richard L. Smith simultaneously started an investigation and the Equitable Gas Company started one.

The plant employed 285 men.

Practically every one of the 50 employes of the Pittsburgh Iron Bed Company, Reedsdale street, were injured when windows were blown out and pieces of steel crashed through the building.

Buildings more than three miles from the scene were damaged and windows shattered.

Penn avenue, Wood street, Fifth avenue and other downtown streets were glass strewn. The shock apparently had been carried along the pipe system of the gas company.

Sewer and water pipes for a radius of 10 blocks were wrecked. Electric light wires were blown down and these charged the water which flooded the streets with a deadly current.

Police roped off the area around the tank for a mile.

Store fronts on Duquesne Heights, two miles away, were shattered.

Hundreds of pupils of the Conroy Public School in Page street were preparing to enter the school building when the blast came.

Windows of the school were blown to bits and fell at the feet of the children. Many were cut, but none seriously injured, as far as could be learned an hour after the blast.

Every hospital in the city was receiving victims in what threatened to be one of Pittsburgh's greatest disasters. Trucks of every description, private cars, taxicabs, police patrols and fire apparatus were pressed into service to transport the victims to hospitals.

Hospitals on the North Side were packed to overflowing and it was necessary to carry the victims to other institutions throughout the city. Policemen were pressed into service to ride on the running boards of machines carrying victims and they raced through the downtown section, headed for outlying hospitals.

The tank that let go was one of the older containers at the plant. Officials of the Equitable Gas Company said it had a capacity of 5,500,000 cubic feet of gas and cost $750,000. The tank was not nearly filled to capacity with gas, it was said.

Other tanks at the plant which escaped the blast have capacities up to 1,250,000 cubic feet volume and were erected at a cost of $7,500,000 each.

Five members of the family of Paul Mundekie, 1222 Reedsdale street, are patients in the Mercy Hospital. Mundekie, his wife, Eleanor, the four-month-old daughter Elizabeth, Stanley, 5, and Anna, 9, are all patients in one ward.

Police and firemen were stunned with the suddenness of the disaster. They heard the blast all over the city and stood by apparatus waiting for some kind of an alarm or summons. Telephone service was wrecked almost immediately, together with electric power lines, trolley wires and telegraph communication throughout the North Side.

All Red Cross nurses and social workers of the local unit were called for service following the explosion and dispatched to hospitals and homes in the devastated area.

At the time of the explosion several men employed by the Riter-Conley Construction Company were high on the framework of the tank making repairs. The extent of their injuries has not been learned.

Ten of the 15 employes of the city asphalt plant in Shore avenue were reported killed. The plant, which is directly across the street from the gas plant, was completely wrecked.

Many of those injured in the downtown district were hit by flying plate glass as display windows let go. Three were injured when a window in McCreery's crashed into the street and another when a large window in the Hamburger company store, at 927 Penn avenue, was shattered.

All city police court cases, in which patrolmen were involved, were adjourned by the various magistrates.

Mrs. Enoch Rauh, director of the Department of Public Welfare, ordered all available doctors and nurses from Mayview Hospital to the scene of the explosion. She also pressed into service five social workers from her own office, and 10 city physicians.

The crush at the morgue became terrific. Police reserves were summoned to keep the crowd in check.

Additional undertakers were called to assist the morgue force in preparing the bodies.

The body of C. F. Michaels, superintendent of the demolished plant, was the first of the dead identified.

The Bell Telephone Company reported that no main cables were broken, but that scores of private service lines were put out of commission by the blast. The Cedar and Fairfax exchanges were swamped with calls, and additional operators were rushed to the North Side to help take care of the overload.

Thirty windows were smashed in the Allegheny High School in Arch street, half a mile from the explosion, causing such destruction that school was not convened today, nor will there be a session of the evening school tonight. Pupils were on their way to school when the blast let go a few minutes before 9 o'clock.

St. Peter's parochial school, West Diamond street, was turned into an emergency hospital for the injured by Father Devlin, who dismissed classes for the day.

Ten persons suffered shock and cuts when the windows of a McKees Rocks street car were shattered by the force of the explosion in West Carson street, near the Point Bridge. Nine of the injured were taken to the South Side Hospital and the other victim was attended at St. Joseph's Hospital. All victims except one were later removed to their homes.

Among the first doctors to arrive at the scene of the disaster were Dr. Maurice Klickstein and Dr. Meyers Kraft, both internes at St. Joseph's Hospital.

CONFESSES HE SHOT GIRL

Duncan Bush, 30, of 237 Emerson street, clerk in an East End hat store, confessed today that he shot his sweetheart in a lonely field off Fox Chapel road last night.

The girl, Marion Clark, 27, of 331 Princeton place, is in St. Francis Hospital in a serious condition, bullets in her head and shoulder.

"She insisted I marry her," Bush told detectives, explaining that they had been close friends for three years.

He had, he said, driven to the Fox Chapel road in an auto on which the two of them were paying installments, and had instructed her to leave the car while he fixed a puncture.

"I intended to shoot myself, too," he confessed, "but I lost nerve after I shot her."

Information charging felonious assault and battery was preferred against Bush before Alderman A. M. Maloney.

TUBE PLANT EMPLOYES AT BENWOOD PAID OFF

BENWOOD, W. Va., Nov. 14—Dismissal of salaried employes at the Riverside plant of the National Tube Company here is regarded as tending to confirm rumors that the plant is to be dismantled. Some of the men were given three months pay with notice of loss of position. It is one of the largest of the steel corporations plants in the Wheeling district. The Carnegie Steel plant at Bellaire, O., is virtually abandoned, only three men being on the payroll.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO TELEPHONE USERS

As a result of the explosion in Manchester this morning, telephone usage has increased to a point where difficulty is being experienced in completing emergency and other important calls.

In the interest of prompt restoration of normal conditions, telephone users are requested to refrain from making any unnecessary calls today.

Says Growing Deaths Blast Dry Myth

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—Another "prohibition myth" has been punctured by insurance studies showing a steady rise in the death rate since prohibition, Capt. W. H. Stayton, national chairman of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, declared Sunday.

Not only have deaths increased while the drys assert they were falling off, said Stayton, but "the alcoholic mortality toll has increased 300 per cent in the last seven years."

STRETCHES AFTER 35

"Moreover, the most alarming fact revealed by the insurance company's statistical report is the steadily increasing death rate of men more than 35 years old," Stayton added. "Dr. Louis I. Dublin, chief statistician for the Metropolitan Insurance Company, recently declared this fact was due largely to alcoholism, with its associated conditions of cirrhosis of the liver, heart and kidney diseases."

According to Capt. Stayton, Dr. Dublin also said:

"Prohibition has not been effective in cutting down the death rate of the male sex, and especially has this been proved in cities. If the saloon has gone and the great body of workingmen do not consume as much liquor as in pre-prohibition days, as the 'drys' claim, then it is only too clear that what they drink now, even if in smaller quantities, is of such a deleterious character as to result in no advantage in health.

"The quality of liquor dispensed throughout the country is sufficiently bad to make up for the alleged smaller quantity consumed."

TRY OUT NOVEL TRAFFIC SIGNAL

An automatic traffic signal that gives its own signal to vehicles as they near the intersection is to be given a test here soon, Burton W. Marsh, city traffic engineer, said yesterday. The new device was recently inspected by Mr. Marsh at New Haven, Conn.

Automobiles nearing the corner call for and receive their own signals through a metal treadle placed in the roadway. As the wheels of the car strikes the treadle, an electric current is sent to the control box of the signal and if no car is approaching from the other direction, the signal immediately turns green.

4 ATTACK, HOLDUP NORTH BRADDOCK MEN

Gus Olson, 42, of 581 Stokes avenue, and Alex Palm, 41, of 533 Stokes avenue, both of North Braddock, were attacked by four Negroes at Penn street and Talbot avenue, North Braddock, at 8 o'clock Saturday night. Palm was robbed of a gold watch and $5.

Notre Dame Loss Setback for Al, Will Thinks

CULVER, Ind., Nov. 14.—Had a long chat with Mayor Thompson in Chicago yesterday. A smart guy that and don't you believe otherwise.

WILL ROGERS

This thing of playing George Washington against King George—he knows a lot of applesauce better than you do. Bill don't dislike the King personally, but they have been kinder giving George Washington the worst of it in the Chicago second and third readers. If it had been in the fifth or sixth readers Chicago never would a noticed it.

P. S. Notre Dame's defeat Saturday in New York was the first setback Al Smith has had. I am going up to South Bend tonight to help cheer Knute up.

WILL ROGERS.

Hemorrhoids Disappear

All Pile Misery Banished Without Cutting or Salves.

External treatments seldom banish Piles for the very good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at May Drug Co., who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

A SPECIAL RUG PURCHASE

More Than Four Hundred New, Perfect Rugs, at $30 Presenting Most Unusual Savings

Our rug-selling space is greatly restricted because of the annual pilgrimage of the Toys to the Ninth Floor. In order to focus attention upon the newly-created Eighth Floor temporary location, we sought out every important mill with orders for all surplus and special lots of rugs which might be sold at a strikingly low price. For weeks these rugs have been arriving; and now the day for selling them is here—to-morrow.

Splendidly Woven, Excellently Patterned Axminsters and Velvets in Sizes 9x12, 8.3x10.6, 7.6x9 and 6x9 Feet

Each rug is strictly fresh from the mill—just opened from the burlap. The styles are up-to-the-minute—including generous assortments of the smaller figured Oriental patterns and the bold, colorful domestic patterns. Besides rugs for the living and dining room and bedroom, many are patterns suitable for use in business offices—and some are specially designed to go into new apartments.

Anyone Who Needs a Rug Now, or Who Foresees a Need for One or More Rugs Later, Need Not Hesitate at the Lowness of the Pricing. There Are Some Veritable "Prizes" here. Starting at 9 O'Clock.

Margie Finds Jerry Sick; With Arrest Facing Her She Plays the Nurse

can't help it. I . . ."

His voice trailed away. Mabel! That must be Mabel Farrington, his cousin, the pretty grave girl whose secret Margie knew was her secret, too. Mabel, his cousin—who loved him. A pang went through her. She got up and went to the window.

She felt very tired now. She had pawned a ring that had been her mother's and in exchange for the little she had received for it, bought herself some meager meals. Jerry had had nothing, as the doctor advised. No wonder he looked so thin and weak. But soon he would be better—he would be able to sit up—to have broth and things like that.

He fell into his most peaceful sleep so far. Margie got up and went outside, anxious to escape from the confinement of the room for just a little while.

It was mid-afternoon. She did not stay very long. When she came back, she noticed that the door of Jerry's room as usual had not stayed shut. She was about to enter when she saw him through the crack of the door.

Then she drew up, not daring to breathe. She had come in softly. He could not have heard her yet. Her heart was beating violently now.

For his eyes, wide-eyed, were the calm eyes of someone in possession of his senses. The fever had left him as swiftly as it had come. Though he looked weak and tired now, it did not take a doctor to tell that the fire which had burned him up had passed.

Margie stood there miserably, not knowing what to do. If she went in he would recognize her, know her. He would look at her as if he hated her. She could not bear that. She felt helpless. Only it dawned on her at last she had done the little she could, and now her task was over.

She couldn't bear facing him—not after what had happened, not if he hated her.

She turned and softly made her way downstairs. Her own head felt hot, as if she too were feverish. She pressed her hands to her temples. She must tell someone, let someone know, who would take care of him, see that he had food.

She walked aimlessly, wondering, wondering what to do. She was thinking that now she could not see him anymore, and a lump came into her throat. It would be harder to forget him now, harder than ever.

She was on Fifth avenue. From the doors of a great store, a uniformed porter hurried to open the door of a car. A girl came out slowly, looked at Margie, gave a little exclamation.

For a moment Margie could not remember where she had seen her. "I'm tired," she thought. "I'm so tired." She smiled, but the girl did not smile. Then memory returned in a flash. It was Mabel Farrington, Jerry's cousin, about whom he had talked in his delirium.

Mabel Farrington! Margie drew in her breath.......

"Please—I want to speak to you—see you a moment. I—I've something rather important to tell you," she stammered.

Mabel Farrington looked at her with dark unfriendly eyes.

"What is it?" she asked curtly.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

"IT'S about Jerry," Margie faltered.

Mabel Farrington seemed to grow a little tense. She studied Margie's face.

"Oh, is it?" she asked. "Well, why tell me? What's it got to do with me?"

Margie looked at her in dismay. She remembered her impression of gentleness and sweetness; it seemed to her that this could hardly be the same girl who had given her that impression.

"I'm sorry," she murmured. "I—well, never mind." She turned to go. But where?

Suddenly Mabel was at her side. "How dare you!" she exclaimed, "how dare you say what you've said—and then leave me? What is it? Tell me! Tell me, do you hear?"

Mabel Farrington's lower lip was quivering. Her fingers moved with a hard, slow restlessness. She looked overwrought, tormented by perverse emotions, carried out of herself. But Margie did not like her now, scarcely even pitied her.

"Why should I tell you?" she asked quietly. "I—I thought you might care to help, but—" She shrugged her shoulders.

Mabel made an angry gesture. Her eyes grew large, then narrowed, as if she were going to burst into tears.

"Don't be so unfair. Can't you see I—I'm upset? I don't know what I'm saying. Tell me—please!"

And the anger in the voice was blended with an entreaty so sincere that Margie was touched.

"Not here, we can't stand here like this," Mabel was saying.

She invited the way to the car at the curb, and the chauffeur swung open the door.

"Where to, miss?"

"Nowhere right now, Robert."

Margie stepped inside. There was something grotesque about this interview, she thought, parked here on the avenue. But Mabel Farrington was certainly right. To have talked out there, grown excited perhaps, and attracted unpleasant attention—this was a way of avoiding that. For it was plain that Mabel's self-control was not very well in hand.

"Now, what is it?" she asked. "What did you have to tell me about—about him?"

"He's in trouble. He's got to have help. I—I didn't know whom to ask." Margie handkerchief was between her fingers. She was slowly twisting it. She felt now that she was more nervous and unhappy than Mabel could possibly be.

"Oh, you need help — you thought you could come to me to borrow money," Mabel snapped furiously. "Money—of course! Expecting me to help you—the two of you!"

"Please!" Margie looked at her in dismay. "You don't understand—you really don't." She fought hard not to be angry, trying to make allowances for Mabel's jealousy and high-pitched nervousness. "I'm not asking anything for myself, and it isn't money, anyway. He's sick—Jerry's sick. Now do you understand?"

"Sick?" Mabel drew in her breath. "Not dangerously—you don't mean—"

"I just mean he's got to have someone to look out for him—take care of him—see that he has food and proper attention."

"But," Mabel protested, "you—why don't you—? Why have you come to me? I know you love him. I know it perfectly well!"

"Oh, dear, why won't you listen!" Margie exclaimed.

"Because you're not telling the truth. Pretending you don't—don't love him."

"I didn't pretend that," said Margie wearily. "I didn't say that. Only, Jerry and I—we're not going to see each other any more. Can't you understand? That's why I stopped you. Because—because someone has to look out for him, and I can't. He . . . doesn't care for me . . . any more."

There was a long moment of silence, a silence of incredulity. Then suddenly Mabel Farrington's voice broke. "Forgive me! Please try to forgive me. I didn't know what I was saying or doing. But when you love someone so much . . . oh, I don't see how you can forgive me!"

She began to cry. The harshness had gone from her. Impulsively Margie put her arm around Mabel Farrington's shoulder.

"I understand—I do really."

And Mabel said softly. "I don't see how Jerry can help loving you. I don't see how he can help loving you now. Do you really mean that you and he—"

Margie interrupted with a quick nod. "I'd rather not talk about it. But I've told you the truth. And now you will look out for him, won't you?"

To Be Continued.

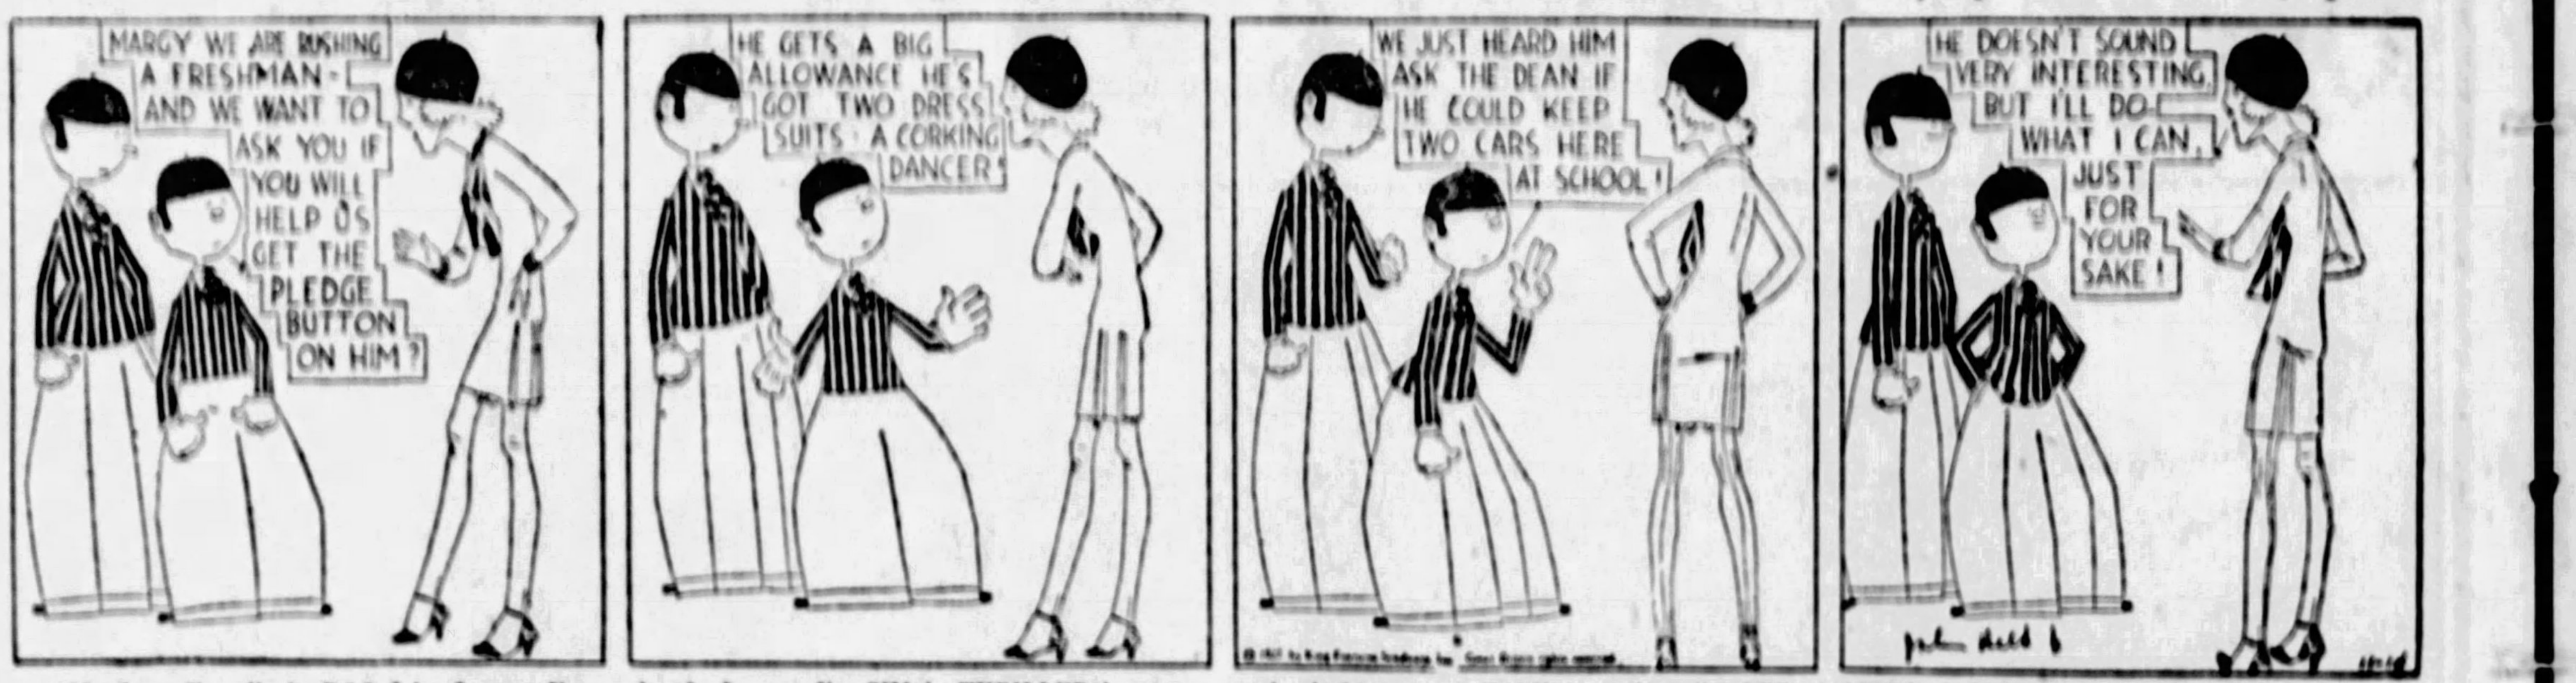
Merely Margy, An Awfully Sweet Girl

Story by Lloyd Mayer

By John Held, Jr.



MARGY WE ARE RUSHING A FRESHMAN—AND WE WANT TO ASK YOU IF YOU WILL HELP US GET THE PLEDGE BUTTON ON HIM?
HE GETS A BIG ALLOWANCE HE'S GOT TWO DRESS SUITS - A CORKING DANCER!
WE JUST HEARD HIM ASK THE DEAN IF HE COULD KEEP TWO CARS HERE AT SCHOOL!
HE DOESN'T SOUND VERY INTERESTING BUT I'LL DO WHAT I CAN, JUST FOR YOUR SAKE!
John Held Jr

"My dear, I'm all-of-a-DOO-dah—I mean I'm HONestly so exCIted I could shell PEAnuts at this point because WHAT do you s'pose? ARab and NOIsy are all hot and BOTHered about some new FRESHman they want to PLEDGE for their fraTERnity and they've asked ME to sort of DO what I CAN about it. Isn't that diVINE, my dear? I mean I'm SIMply THRILLED because p'rhaps this BIMbo is rather atTRACtive and I'm simply DYing to meet somebody atTRACtive at this point, my dear, because I mean I can't TELL you how BORED I am with practicably EV'ry youth I KNOW because, my dear, there really are AWfully few boys a girl of my inTELligence and eduCAtion can TALK to and really GET anything OUT of it because practicably ALL these odd BENnies you meet NOWadays have abs'lutely NOTHing to offer a girl but hot LIPS and sympaTHETic GIN—you know the type! Well, ANYways, my dear, I simply can't WAIT to meet this FRESHman that ARab and NOIsy are raving about at this point because he sounds AWfully inTRIguing, no less, and if I am s'posed to LURE him to his deSTRUCtion or something they honestly couldn't have PICKED anybody more R'ARin' to GO, because what it takes to do THAT I've GOT, my dear, and I bet you ANYthing that what that odd CleOPatra did to Mark ANthony will be NOTHing to what I'll do to this bozo—I mean I ACtually DO!"

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, November 15

ACCORDING to the lunar and mutual transits this day may bring forth the happy result of a long-continued struggle against obstacle and delay. Stable fortune with substantial increase of possessions may be expected to crown patience, persistency and resolution against many odds.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of reaping where they have sown in patience, toil and perseverance. But they should not be carried into rashness and impetuous moves by the turn of their fortunes, for haste and carelessness with hard-earned funds may bring about loss. Make all agreements and handle all papers with caution.

A child born on this day, although being industrious and steadfast, may be disposed to rash and tempestuous acts which may promote self-undoing.

LOVE'S EMBERS

By Adele Garrison

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

Red Beard Trails the Man With the Wolfhound.

IT WAS not a particularly easy task to fit words to my mental picture of the young man with the wolfhound who had just gone through the gates to the train shed, his movements obviously trailed by our queer red-bearded neighbor. I had discarded the word "dapper," which first had risen to my lips, because that word is invariably associated in my mind with little men, and the proportions of the young man were as magnificent as those of the dog whose strength and energy were so engrossing him.

Not exactly realizing why I did so, I found myself noting the items of his appearance and filing them away in the card index of my memory. That he was in his late twenties I was sure, although the black, heavy, close-clipped mustache which he affected might have been responsible for an extra year or two in appearance. For the rest, he was tall, broad-shouldered, narrow-waisted and long-limbed, with an erectness and carriage that betrayed rigid military training, and a poise and manner which spoke as eloquently of gentle breeding as did his meticulous grooming and his cultured intonations.

Dark-eyed, dark-haired, with an expressive, engaging countenance, I made the amused comment to myself that there would be much fluttering of the queer organs modern girls dub their hearts in whatever Eastern Long Island village the lordly youth had chosen as his destination.

The train announcer sounded his last raucous call, the gates to the Montauk train clanged shut, and I realized that my vigil was over, leaving me two bits of information for my pondering. The red-bearded man had traveled a hundred miles that morning for the purpose of going back again a half hour later, and the object of his quest appeared to be the tall youth after whom he had scuttled like a great crab as soon as he caught sight of him.

I locked away that compartment of my mental card index, with a little intuition that the time would not be long before I should open it again. For the present, however, I had more important things to occupy my attention. A glance at my watch and a swift calculation told me that I would be unable to go up to Lillian's hotel before my appointment with Mr. Veritzen, but that I would have ample time to telephone her, and I immediately arose and made my way to the telephone booth.

At the sound of my voice Lillian's exploded into the excited tones which she permits herself when she does not have to be on guard. No one knew better than I that she was not really excited at all, and that to a voice she did not recognize her tone would have been absolutely devoid of surprise or any other emotion. But it was amusing and pleasing to hear her voluble comment.

"For amputating the third toe of the 'ail' " she ejaculated, "what good wind blows you in at this time of the morning? Hevings, cheild, you must have taken that earliest train, designed, I am sure, by a descendant of a Spanish Inquisitor. Aren't you starved? Come right on up and I'll throw some breakfast together upon my trusty grill."

"No, you don't. Thanks so much, just the same," I retorted, laughing. "Katie stuffed me as if I were a Strasbourg goose just before I started, and it is simply impossible for me to eat another mouthful."

"But you're coming up, anyway, aren't you?" she demanded, impatiently.

"Not for a while," I told her. "I have an engagement with Mr. Veritzen at his offices at 11 o'clock."

"Phil Veritzen?" she interrupted. "Why, the man's in Europe, or was the last I heard of him. When did he get back?"

"He didn't," I returned, laughing to cover up an inexplicable confusion which embarrassed and infuriated me. "Or at least he didn't until a few minutes ago. His ship is just in this morning, or something like that. He wirelessed me that he would be in this morning and that he had some new discoveries about which he must consult me as soon as he landed. Hence the 11 o'clock appointment."

Too Much Acid!

Then take this sparkling delightful drink that Italy has known since 1880

There are many preparations designed to neutralize acid conditions but there is only one that gives quick results and still is so pleasant you'll drink it for its taste alone.

And that preparation has been known all over Europe since 1880. It is called

BRIOSCHI
(Pronounced Bree-osky)

In the form of appetizing pure white crystals it foams and bubbles when poured into a half glass of cold water.

Quickly corrects sour stomach, sick headaches, biliousness and all conditions caused by too much acid. Once you try Brioschi you'll become a confirmed user for it's the pleasant way of keeping fit.

75 cents the large can of 24 drinks. At all Italian stores, your favorite druggist or any May Drug Store.

COOKING SCHOOL ECHOES

All recipes on this page cooked in five minutes or less

I MADE all the foods on this page from left-overs of meats and vegetables, deep fried in Crisco—the way the French chef does. Served with a well-seasoned sauce, these dishes will lend a French touch to your meals and at the same time help reduce your household expenses.

Put the Crisco into your cold kettle or saucepan and heat it slowly. There will be no smoke or unpleasant odor if your Crisco is heated right, as explained in each recipe. Don't wait for Crisco to smoke.

You can use the same Crisco for everything you fry—fish, meats, vegetables, even cauliflower and onions—and not one will ever taste of the other. Simply strain the Crisco back into the can after using and once in a while clear it by frying in it a few slices of raw potato.

I do not know how I could keep house without all the good things to eat Crisco gives me. Cakes that you simply cannot tell from those made with butter; the tenderest, flakiest pie crusts; fluffy, golden biscuits.

An Astonishing Blindfold Test

See if this doesn't give you the greatest surprise of your whole cooking experience!

Put a little Crisco on the tip of one spoon. On the tip of another place a little of the fat you are now using; have someone blindfold you, and give you first one, then the other to taste.

Now did you ever imagine there could be such a striking difference in the taste of cooking fats? Think what an improvement Crisco's own sweetness and freshness will make in your own cakes, pies, biscuits, and fried foods.

To test your cooking fat—taste it. Crisco's sweet flavor will astonish you.

Meat Fritters

Bits of cold left-over meat make a delicious meal for four people and it takes only a few minutes to prepare and cook them.

1 cup chopped cold meat	1 cup bread flour
1 tablespoon chopped onion	1 egg, beaten
1 tablespoon chopped parsley	2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon pepper	½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt

Beat egg, add milk, then flour and baking powder sifted together. Beat smooth. Add remaining ingredients. Mix well. Drop by spoonfuls into Crisco heated to 360° F., or when a small piece of bread browns in 60 seconds. Fry until brown and thoroughly cooked. Drain on brown paper. Serve with left-over gravy or cream sauce seasoned with a little Worcestershire sauce.

One cup left-over mashed potato may take the place of the flour, baking powder and milk. Simply mix in order given and fry at 375-385° F., or when bread browns in 40 seconds.

½ cup green pepper with lamb and potatoes is delicious but you need to roll this mixture in egg and crumbs, to hold it together.

Fried Vegetable Balls

A new and delicious way to make left-over vegetables go a long way: Cooked spinach, cabbage, parsnips, turnips; carrots plain or with green peas or chopped celery; uncooked green peppers. Serve with cold meat. Or serve with a cream sauce for the main luncheon dish. Prepare them any time, and fry in Crisco two minutes when ready to serve. Or reheat them in the oven a day or two later—they will taste as fresh and delicious as when first made.

2 cups cooked vegetable, chopped	1 egg yolk
2 tablespoons Crisco	½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons grated onion	2 tablespoons grated cheese
*½ cup dry bread crumbs	⅛ teaspoon allspice

More dry crumbs and 1 egg for "breading"

Combine ingredients and let stand 10 minutes to swell crumbs. Shape into balls. (*If not stiff enough to handle add more bread crumbs.) Beat egg with ¼ cup water until mixed. Roll balls in crumbs, then in egg and then in crumbs again. Drop in hot deep Crisco (390° F.), or when a piece of bread browns in 20 seconds, until brown. Drain on soft paper and serve.

Croquettes Tropica

1½ cups minced cooked chicken	1 teaspoon lime juice (or lemon)
½ cup peeled ground Brazil nuts	½ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk, beaten	⅛ teaspoon paprika
⅛ teaspoon curry powder	⅛ teaspoon celery salt
	*White sauce to mix (see below)

Dry bread crumbs and egg

Mix ingredients in order given. Form into shape. Roll in crumbs, then in egg, then again in crumbs. Arrange in wire basket and fry until brown in deep hot Crisco (395° F.), or when a small piece of bread browns in 20 seconds. Drain on soft paper. Serve with cream sauce.

Ham Fritters with Bananas

An unusually delicious and attractive way to serve left-over ham. Bananas are especially nice fried in deep Crisco.

2 cups chopped left-over ham	2 tablespoons milk
⅛ teaspoon pepper	Chopped onion if desired
2 eggs	Salt if needed
3 tablespoons bread flour

Beat eggs, add milk, seasoning and ham, then flour. Drop by spoonfuls into hot Crisco (395° F.), or when a small piece of bread browns in 20 seconds, until brown. Drain on soft paper. Arrange on center of platter and surround with bananas fried as follows:

FRIED BANANAS:—Take 6 small bananas, peel, dip in lemon juice, roll in dry bread crumbs, and fry as above until brown. Garnish with parsley.

Use the same white sauce to make croquettes from other left-overs (fish, beef, veal, combinations of vegetables). Season as you like. Use enough sauce to hold together and follow the same method. Always use dry bread crumbs when egg is used.

*WHITE SAUCE (for mixing): Blend together 4 tablespoons flour with 2 tablespoons Crisco. Beat in slowly 1 cup warm milk. Stir over fire until thick. Add ½ teaspoon salt.

CREAM SAUCE (for serving): Use 2 tablespoons flour, 1 tablespoon Crisco, 1 cup milk. Use plain or season with grated cheese or Worcestershire sauce.

CRISCO was used by Mrs. George O. Thurn in the Sun-Telegraph Cooking School last week

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Juveniles to Press Debutantes and School Set in Season's Social Activities

CHAIRMAN FOR RECEPTION

Mrs. John J. Quinn is chairman of the reception committee for the gathering of former parishioners and friends of St. Kieran's parish to be held Wednesday night in the Bryn Mawr auditorium.

MRS. JOHN J. QUINN

THE debutantes with their coming-out teas and the school set with their holiday dances are not the only ones for whom the social world plans diversion. The very, very young set is going to be invited to attend the "meetings" of the Children's Skating Club to be held this year on Monday afternoons at Duquesne Gardens from November 21 to April 2. This organization replaces the old Tuesday Afternoon Skating Club, which was still in being last year.

Cards have been sent out under the direction of the committee, which includes Mrs. E. H. Jennings, Jr., Mrs. Robley Houston, Mrs. Herbert M. May, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, Mrs. Matthew Taylor and Mrs. William R. Blair, Jr.

The third Sewickley debutante to make her bow to society this season is Mary Elizabeth McMahon, daughter of the Harry B. McMahons, of "Lombardy," Coraopolis Heights. She is being presented at a tea this afternoon from 4 to 6 in the McMahon home by her charming mother.

Mrs. McMahon and the debutante are receiving their guests in the spacious, high-ceilinged living room with embankments of ferns and chrysanthemums in the rich colors of fall forming the background. Everywhere are the debutante's gift flowers.

The debutante is wearing a distinctive robe de style gown, with the characteristic uneven hem-line. Coral moire is the material used in fashioning the frock, trimmed with touches of silver. She is carrying an arm bouquet of Parnet roses and orchids. A sharp contrast in color is offered in the gown worn by Mrs. McMahon, made of blue velvet. She is wearing a corsage of Parnet roses.

In the dining room the tea table is gay with red roses, white bouvardia and heather.

Mrs. McMahon has as her aides Mrs. David L. Mickeel, Mrs. Robert Wray, Mrs. John Joy Edson, Mrs. Frederick C. Ewart, Mrs. Kirtland Gardner, Mrs. Philip W. Gundelfinger, Mrs. D. Allyn Garber and Mrs. A. F. Field, of Wheeling, W. Va.

As aides the debutante has Margaret McCready, Harriet Ramsburg, Anne King Scott, Marie Boggs McBride, Elizabeth George, Anna Marshall, Suzanne Trimble, all co-debutantes; Margaret Ramsburg, Rebekah George, Caroline Gilchrist, Virginia Goldsbury, Mrs. William T. Kilborn, Mrs. Ira Fitch Brainard and Mrs. W. Leland Ingham.

Mary Elizabeth was graduated from Mrs. Bows' School at Briarcliff Manor. Last winter she traveled and studied in Europe, spending much time in Paris, Vienna, Florence and other cities of the old world.

Mary Elizabeth will be seen, of course, at the many debutante parties for the Sewickley buds and those of Pittsburgh as well. And a number of entertainments are being planned in her honor.

Among the first of these will be a luncheon which Mrs. William Kilborn and Mrs. W. Leland Ingham will give in the home of the latter on November 19. Sharing honors at this event with Mary Elizabeth will be another popular Sewickley bud, Marie Boggs McBride, daughter of the William McBrides.

The only debutante in the list whose "coming out" date has not yet been announced is Alice Billings, daughter of C. P. Billings, of Ellsworth avenue.

Alice is still in school. She is a student at Smith, as you know. Plans for her bow to society have not yet been completed, but it is expected she will come out during one of her vacations from school. Since the holiday vacation is the longest, she will perhaps be presented during that time.

Another debutante party will be given November 23 by Mrs. Edward D. Gilmore, of Thorn street, Sewickley, who will entertain at bridge in the Allegheny Country Club for Harriet Ramsburg, daughter of the Charles Ramsburgs, of East drive, Sewickley, who is to make her debut January 2. Harriet spent last year studying in Mme. Clement's School in Paris.

The annual Thanksgiving donation day of the Presbyterian Hospital will be held Thursday afternoon in the hospital, Sherman and Montgomery avenues, North Side. A reception will be held by the board of trustees and officers of the hospital association, and after a concert to be given by Mrs. Christine Miller Clemson, tea will be served by the Hospital Aid Society. Mrs. Walter S. Church is president of the society and those who will pour include Mrs. Ralph Harbison, Mrs. William M. McKelvy, Mrs. William M. Bell and Mrs. John McCartney Kennedy. Mrs. John A. Tannehill is chairman of the committee in charge of the tea.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. McEachran, of Dinsmore avenue, Crafton, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret D. McEachran, and Paul A. Smith, of Bellevue and West Virginia, which was solemnized November 5 by the Rev. Kinley McMillan, of Sheraden. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are living in Howe street. Mr. Smith is a graduate of the West Virginia University school of engineering and is a member of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity.

A bazar will be held Thursday and Friday nights in the parlors of the Lawrenceville Presbyterian Church, Thirty-ninth street, with Miss Jane Maxwell as chairman. There will be a country store and antique booth as well as booths for the sale of candy, fancywork and domestic articles.

* * *

The Wilkinsburg White Shrine will hold a card party, bazar and supper Monday afternoon and night, November 21, in the Wilkinsburg Masonic Temple, South avenue. Mrs. Edith S. Miller has appointed Mrs. Sarah McDonald as general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Nancy Dibler.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Heath Speer and Miss Edith Speer, of Thomas boulevard, will be joint hostesses at a tea Friday afternoon in the Twentieth Century Club. Their niece, Miss Ann Blakely Watt, will receive with them, and a few of their close friends will serve as aides.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Clapp, of Edgeworth, have made known the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Deming Clapp, to William A. Galbraith, of Sewickley.

A rally will be held tomorrow in Kaufmann's by the workers in charge of the ball to be held December 7 in Syria Mosque by the Jewish Home for Babies and Children.

Miss Nell Cavanaugh and Miss Hilda M. Weber will be hostesses at the annual Thanksgiving card party to be given Wednesday in Mansman's Hall, Penn avenue, by Court East Liberty, No. 260, Catholic Daughters of America.

* * *

Dorcas Chapter No. 431, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold a harvest dance and novelty party Thursday night in the Congress club house. Mrs. La Verne Lancaster is general chairman.

Patricia Pitt

WILL EXPLAIN WORK OF MORALS COURT

The busy Dormont New Century Club, with its numerous departments and committees, always has some activity on the current calendar.

Next Friday afternoon, Miss Grace DeHaven Woodrow will speak before the members on the work of Morals Court. For her talk, which will follow the 2 o'clock business meeting, she will be introduced by Mrs. J. W. Youn Jr., chairman of the program committee. Musical numbers will be provided by Mrs. J. Trautman, Jr., soprano. Mrs. L. V. McCune of the social committee will be chairman of hostesses for the day, and will have charge of the tea hour.

A special rehearsal of the club choral was held this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Harold G. Ewens of Greenmont avenue.

Mrs. William A. Young of Los Angeles avenue, director of study in the dramatic department, is hostess for this afternoon's meeting. The feature of the afternoon was the interpretation of the Kaufman-Connolly play, "Beggar on Horseback," by the program committee, including Mrs. J. N. Orbin, Mrs. F. T. Harper, Mrs. A. Thomas Lehman, Mrs. G. D. Rose and Mrs. L. W. McCoy.

A meeting of the club's Junior Auxiliary will be held at the home of Mrs. S. J. Wood, McFarland road, tomorrow night. Domestic and foreign current events will be discussed by Mrs. Elry Rudert and Miss Gladys Campbell. The speaker will be Miss Mabel O. Taylor, whose subject is "Seeing With the Blind."

An outstanding program in observance of the joint Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association world week of prayer, November 13-20, is being planned at Central Branch Y. W. C. A., Chatham street, tomorrow, at the Forum Supper at 6 o'clock, the Rev. Dr. C. W. Petty will speak on "America" which is the topic for world prayer for the day. Mrs. James C. Rea will preside.

The world service banquet on Friday will be the second big event of the week. Miss Helen A. Davis, associate general secretary of the National Board, New York City, will be the speaker. Miss Davis, who has visited Associations in all parts of the world, has recently returned from Manila, where she assisted in organizing and opening the first Y. W. C. A. in the Philippine Islands. Mrs. Rose Leaner Chislett will sing several groups of songs and special organ numbers will be given by James Philip Johnston. Because Central Branch, in its World Service contributions, supports the work of Miss Jane Shaw Ward, head of the National Training System in China, Mrs. James C. Rea, chairman of the world service committee, will describe briefly Pittsburgh's part in the present Chinese situation. The Chinese motif will be used in decorations, program features and menu.

The closing event of the week will be the annual international vesper service on Sunday, at which Miss Ruth Louise Parker will speak on "The Y. W. C. A. in China Today." Miss Parker returned in July from China where she was for many years a secretary, part of her salary being paid by a Pittsburgh contributor. International Institute will cooperate in presenting folk songs and costumes of the nation.

The Business Girls' League of the East Liberty Young Women's Christian Association will give a city-wide banquet for business girls Tuesday evening, November 22. The following branches will participate: Turtle Creek, Wilmerding, McKeesport, Wilkinsburg, Lawrenceville, Center Avenue, Central Branch, North Side, International Institute, and East Liberty. Mrs. John Irwin, chairman of the Business Girls' Department at Central Branch, and Mrs. W. C. Leonard, of the East Liberty Business Girls, are in general charge of arrangements.

Dr. O. E. Jennings, of the University of Pittsburgh, will address the Nature Study Club at the Henry Clay Frick Training School Thursday evening. His subject: "Plants at Home in Pennsylvania." A board meeting will be held at 5 o'clock and dinner will be served at 6. Many of the members and their friends spent the week-end at Na-wak-wa Lodge, the Club's mountain home in Forbes Forest. The annual card party has been postponed from December until February.

* * *

The next meeting of the Brookline Civic Club's dramatic department will be held Tuesday, November 22, at the home of Mrs. Charles Vokach, Berkshire avenue. Mrs. H. L. Porter will read a play by Euripides and Mrs. William Hudson will talk on the drama of the middle ages. The play-producing group will rehearse the one-act plays, "Please Pass 'the Cream'" and "The Borrowed Luncheon," which will be presented on the club's program on husband's night, January 4.

Rehearsals are being held for the play, "The Parlor Maid," which is to be presented in East Liberty Carnegie Library Tuesday night, November 29, as a benefit for the Curtis Home for Women and Girls. Mrs. Warner B. Shepherd heads the committee in charge of tickets. The play will be given by members of the Non Rettep Club, including Miss Margaret Matchett, Miss Elizabeth Schaffer, Miss Jean Carlisle, Miss Emma Hunter, Miss Millicent Lindsay, Miss Marguerite Thompson, Miss Willa Wynn, Miss Irene Lindsay, Miss Ellen Fullerton, and Miss Emily Frey.

Miss Betty Bell will give a talk on "Fashion Advertising" for the radio program which the Congress of Clubs will put out over KDKA at 10:15 tomorrow morning.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland M.D.

U.S. Senator from New York

For Health, Keep the Mind Free of Worries

IN A BOOK I read the other day were found these words: "Nothing is so dead as the body once the soul is gone; nothing so ill as the body when the soul is ill."

DR. COPELAND

This would make a wonderful text for a preacher. Is it not a good text, too, for a preacher of health?

There are other similar sayings. A familiar one is this: "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

Who can doubt that the soul, the mind, the inner nature—who can doubt that this part of man has much to do with his state of health, his physical vigor and his prospect of long life?

A discouraged man lacks vitality. A worried man has lost the energy to do his work well. An unhappy man is filled with aches and pains. It is indeed true that nothing is so ill as the body when the soul is ill.

Many a doctor has been worried because his remedies fail to act. The patient does not respond to treatment as all other patients have responded.

It is uphill work for the physician if the patient has no will to get well. There is no tonic like a cheerful and hopeful mind. The soul supplies an element which vitalizes the prescription. Without this the cure is not complete.

Much of the work of the physician—I sometimes think it is his most important work—is the advice he gives. Many a sick man needs nothing from a box or bottle. What he needs is treatment for his sick soul.

If the doctor lingers at the bedside, it may not be because he is puzzled by the physical symptoms. He is trying to find words to drive away the mental agony or doubt or fear of the sick man. If he can ease the mind, he knows he can bring health to his patient.

A great many times the mental state can be traced to physical ills. Underlying the depression, nervousness and moroseness, may be a diseased organ. Normal thinking returns when the physical cause is discovered and removed.

But I am confident it works the other way, too. The illness of the soul poisons the body and perverts its functions.

The benefits of religion—I care not what religion—are not confined to the spiritual nature. The exaltation of mind that religion gives, makes the body glow with health, adding to the prospect of life for him who is fortunate enough to possess this mental state.

Answers to Health Queries

R. H. Q.—What causes canker sores in the mouth?

2.—Do you advise a tonic for dry hair?

3.—Will a little common baking soda after meals help gases in the system?

A.—This is usually indicative of an acid condition in the system. Correct the diet and avoid any constipation. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2.—Yes. For particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

3.—Correct the diet by cutting down on sugars, starches and coffee. Eat simple food. Overcome any constipation. Exercise and lots of fresh air are essential. For details send a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

A. F. L. Takes Up Mine Strike Here

Two hundred and fifty executives of the American Federation of Labor were in Pittsburgh this morning for a conference today in the Roosevelt Hotel to discuss plans for carrying the fight of the striking coal miners into politics. The delegates to the conference represent more than 3,000,000 organized workers.

Former Gov. Gifford Pinchot is scheduled to address the conference at its opening session. Gov. Fisher, who also is invited, will be unable to attend because of the large amount of executive work.

President William Green will call the meeting to order and he is expected to outline a plan for backing up the 45,000 striking miners, in the Pennsylvania district, in their fight to maintain the Jacksonville wage scale. John L. Lewis, international president of the miners' union, will arrive this morning with a large delegation, including Thomas Kennedy, secretary and treasurer of the miners' union.

According to Philip Murray, international vice president of the miners' union, it is the intention of the labor chiefs to apply political pressure, through force of public opinion, upon office-holders.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

THE MONDAY ROAST

A WOMAN never realizes just how little "woman's sacred influence" amounts to until she tries to convince a man in a political argument.

* * *

That was a sad day for women when man discovered that he was "the noblest work of God!" But it has never discouraged us from trying to put a few improvements on Heaven's Masterpiece.

* * *

Nowadays no woman is too young for a job nor too old for a love-affair—and as long as she has these two, she will never petrify.

HELEN ROWLAND

A man may be perfectly honest when he tells you that you are the "first and only" woman he ever loved; but don't forget that you are "starting something" which it may take a lot of other girls to finish.

* * *

Do your voting quietly. A woman escapes a lot of arguments and keeps a lot more friends, if she can just manage to look blank and protest that she doesn't "understand politics."

A man is old, not when his glands and his arteries lose their pep, but when his imagination becomes so feeble that no woman can make him even fancy himself in love.

A few flashes of silence between her flashes of wit would greatly improve almost any girl's conversation these snappy days.

The world owes every man a living; but what always shocks and astonishes a college graduate is the bitter discovery that he will have to hustle around and COLLECT it.

Once the notion that a girl is hopelessly in love with him has become fixed in a man's mind, you might as well try to unscramble an omelet as to attempt to extract it from his consciousness.

Woman wants but little here below—a little of EVERYTHING!

Macartney Would Bar 'Desertion Divorce'

The elimination of desertion as a recognized reason for divorce, a drastic change in the Presbyterian Church law, is recommended in a report of the Rev. Dr. Clarence E. Macartney of Pittsburgh and Dr. William Chalmers Covert of Philadelphia, which is being sent to Presbyterian ministers throughout the country.

This change will leave but one recognized ground for divorce, that of infidelity. The report will reach more than 10,000 ministers in this country. Final action of the recommendation will be taken up at the next general assembly of the church at Tulsa, Okla., in May, 1928. Dr. Macartney's recommendation is made after an exhaustive analysis of the teachings of Christ and His Disciples and a summary of the divorce problems of today.

In closing his report, Dr. Macartney said, "The Presbyterian Church must do her part in setting firmly new bulwarks of defense about the home. The committee urgently calls to all church members to undertake together in a corporate effort, the rededication of marriage and the home to holy purposes and higher ends."

NORTH SIDER SHOT 7 TIMES IN BRAWL

A man believed to be A. J. Thomas of the North Side is in the Citizens General Hospital in New Kensington in a critical condition, shot seven times in a fight in a New Kensington store Saturday night. A letter addressed to Thomas at a North Side postoffice box was found in the victim's clothing. Although several persons were questioned about the shooting, police have not yet found a witness. Antonio Frascetti, 23, of Seventeenth street, New Kensington, is being held by the authorities, although he denies knowledge of the affair.

VARNISH EXPLOSION CAUSES $3,000 FIRE

An explosion in one of five large kettles of varnish in the yard of the Pruett-Schaffer Chemical Company, Tabor street, resulted in a fire last night that burned for more than two hours and which caused $3,000 damage. Men who were stirring the contents of the kettles escaped injury. A squad of firemen used chemicals on the blaze while others poured water on nearby tanks and other property.

How Calles Started Anti-U. S. Revolution in Nicaragua

FOLLOWING are the highlights in today's article, the first of a series to be published by this newspaper, revealing the anti-American activities of the Mexican government:

Original documents taken from the secret archieves of the Mexican government, and reproduced photographically and textually, show:

That President Calles, seeking to overthrow the Nicaraguan government (because of its friendship for the United States), organized and financed a revolution in Nicaragua, headed by Dr. Juan Bautista Sacasa.

That Calles issued and signed an order on his treasury department on June 2, 1926, directing the payment of $50,000 to Dr. Pedro Jose Zepeda "for the purchase of arms and munitions for the Liberal army of Nicaragua." Zepeda was Sacasa's representative in Mexico.

That one day later Calles issued another order calling for the payment of an additional $25,000 to Zepeda, in furtherance of a secret mission confided to him.

That Calles also ordered the payment of money to Dr. Carlos Leon, a Venezulean "Liberal" noted for his anti-American views, and who helped organize the Saccasa Liberal insurrection in Nicaragua.

These documents demonstrate conclusively the truth of the statements made by President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg on the Mexican-Nicaraguan situation last January, and furnish proof which was not available to our Chief Executive at that time.

Tomorrow the Sun-Telegraph will publish further original documents from the secret archives of the Mexican government, and will explain their significance.

SECRET PAPERS SHOW ANTI-AMERICAN PLOT BY MEXICO AND NICARAGUA

rights of foreign nations to be upheld and the obligations to Nicaragua and other Central American nations to be performed, and that intervention was not only justified, but was imperative, if the United States was to fulfill its duty, its obligations and contractual commitments.

Nevertheless, there was considerable opposition in the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States to the intervention of this country and many of the more visionary statesmen took active sides against their own country in this situation, adding greatly to the difficulties of the Coolidge Administration.

On January 13, 1927, Secretary Kellogg issued a statement showing further the extent to which Mexico had fomented revolutions in Nicaragua and alleging a very close relation between the Bolshevism rampant in Russia and the Bolshevist principles, policies and activities of the Government of Mexico.

SECRETARY KELLOGG'S PERFECTLY SOUND STATEMENT WAS DERIDED

This perfectly sound statement of Secretary Kellogg was treated with derision by the opponents of the Administration, by the peace-at-any-price element of the population, and by the ill-balanced statesmen who think the United States is always wrong in its disputes with foreign countries.

Unfortunately, Secretary Kellogg, while he asserted facts and nothing but facts, had not at that time the complete documentary evidence to establish those facts.

Fortunately the Hearst publications now have the documentary evidence to establish the complete proof of Secretary Kellogg's statement, and to sustain all the facts related by President Coolidge in support of the position of the United States Government.

This documentary evidence which The Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph produces, and will continue to publish in consecutive form for some days, was obtained from the secret files of the Mexican Government by men in the employ of that Government, but who were nevertheless opposed to the Bolshevist tendency of that Government and patriotically concerned lest this Bolshevism in Mexico and its connection with Bolshevism in Russia, should eventually destroy their country and wreck the peace and happiness of their people.

The documents in the possession of the Hearst publications were, therefore, brought to this country by these officials intimately connected with the Mexican Government and were delivered to the Hearst publications merely because these officials realized that in this manner they would secure the widest publication of the facts contained in these Government files. These documents are not copies. They are the originals in every case and they bear the recognized and attested signatures of the President and the leading representatives of the Mexican Government.

DOCUMENTS WERE BROUGHT HERE BY OFFICIALS OF MEXICO ITSELF

These documents will be available to the Department of State and to the Congress of the United States of America after they have been presented to the public through the columns of these newspapers.

Publication of these documents will prove positively that the Calles Government did support the Sacasa revolution in Nicaragua, that it did supply money and arms to the revolutionists, and that it did do this with the idea of installing a Bolshevik regime in Nicaragua, hostile to the interests of the United States.

There is no attempt made to establish a case against the Mexican Government. As a matter of fact the Hearst papers are sympathetic with Mexico, except in situations which come into conflict with the interests of our own people.

These documents will be presented as important news facts. While they are not published to support the policy of President Coolidge, they obviously do support the President's policy and prove the absolute necessity of his vigorous action in Nicaragua if the interests of the people of the United States are to be protected.

The Hearst papers, while publishing in this series a number of documents of a nature seriously compromising to the Russian Government, have no special antagonism toward that government. They have always maintained that Russia has a right to the kind of government it desires, and that the Russian people's right to establish their own government should not be interfered with by other governments, but the same principle applies in regard to the attitude of the Bolshevist Government of Russia towards our own government.

The Hearst papers take the stand that we have a right to the kind of government we desire in this country. We have a right to protect the best interests of our own people as we see those interests, and it is seriously objectionable for the governments of other countries to attempt to interfere with the Government of the United States and to prejudice the interests of the people of the United States.

The President's acts thus far have been based on but a small part of the amazing information now in the hands of the Hearst papers.

MEXICAN PEOPLE THEMSELVES NOT HOSTILE TO UNITED STATES

Whatever the attitude of the Mexican Government, it should be understood that the Mexican people are not hostile to the United States. Anti-American editorials are published frequently in Mexican papers, but they are written, usually, in response to official pressure and do not accurately reflect public opinion.

Popular sympathy with the policy of the United States Government is far stronger among middle class Mexicans than Americans realize, and this sympathy sometimes finds expression in curious ways. A somewhat surprising instance occurred during the days immediately following the statement issued by Secretary of State Kellogg on June 12, 1925, declaring that Mexico was "on trial before the world."

CALLES SUPPORTERS CALL FOR VOTES OF CONFIDENCE

The Calles Government quite naturally took immediate steps to consolidate public opinion at home in its behalf, and Calles supporters in the various state legislatures called for votes of confidence.

Deputy Garcia Vega of the Queretaro Legislature asked for such an expression of support and introduced a resolution calling for a vote of "Full confidence in the Government of President Calles during the present crisis." The resolution was defeated, after speeches had been made against it by Deputies Jesus E. Vera and Francisco Parra.

Editorial expression of approval of the American policy in Nicaragua has not found utterance in Mexico during the recent controversy, due to the Calles policy of rigid press control. But a concrete instance of the existence of a strong under-current of pro-American feeling is found in the voluntary offer to the Hearst papers of documents proving conclusively the determination of the Calles Government to prevent Nicaragua's compliance with the terms of the Bryan-Chamorro Treaty of 1916, giving the United States the right to build a canal through Nicaraguan territory and establish a defending naval base at Fonseca Bay, on the Nicaraguan Pacific Coast, and proving, also, many other things.

Six of these documents are published in facsimile today. English translations will be found under the photographic reproduction of the Spanish text of each document. In each instance the Hearst papers have the original document. Three are signed by President Calles, and three by high officials of his government.

EXECUTIVE ORDER CALLED FOR LARGE PAYMENTS TO ZAPEDA

One, an executive order signed by Calles on June 2, 1926, directs the Treasury Department to pay the sum of a hundred thousand pesos ($50,000) to Dr. Pedro Jose Zepeda, "for the purchase of arms and munitions for the Liberal Army of Nicaragua." Dr. Zepeda is the Mexico City agent of the Nicaraguan Liberal Party and of the revolutionary faction headed by Dr. Juan Bautista Sacasa, who was present in Mexico at the time this order was issued.

Though many other documents are available and will be published in their turn, this one, in itself, constitutes documentary proof that the Mexican Government not only supported the Sacasa revolution once it was going, but actually helped organize and finance it. In the order, the specific statement was made by Calles that the money was

3 ARMSTRONG GAS WELLS YIELD 2,500,000 FEET

KITTANNING, Pa., Nov. 14.—Three gas well, with an average yield of 2,500,000 feet, have been drilled in a narrow radius in the Whitesburg field, Armstrong county.

Reporter, Eye-Witness, Tells of Explosion

By ALBERT GOUGH

The terrible havoc and destruction that came with the deafening Equitable Gas Company explosion today was so sudden—and terrifying—that even an eye-witness can scarcely describe it. I was but three blocks away when the explosion occurred.

AUTO'S WINDOWS SHAKEN

I had just turned into Beaver avenue from Ridge avenue when the whole world seemed to rock. The windows were closed in my car and the concussion shook it violently.

The street was filled with flying glass, window frames and all kinds of debris. I stopped in the middle of the street, not knowing what had happened, and looked back. The whole sky was filled with flames shooting high into the air.

It was terrifying! The flames only lasted for about two minutes, but before they had died down the street was filled with panic-stricken men, women and children, who poured out of the houses and office buildings. Some of them were cut and bruised and staggered into the street, where they collapsed. I saw at least a dozen in the immediate vicinity drop over unconscious.

Fear-stricken parents tried in vain to calm screaming children and pandemonium reigned. I pulled my car up to the curb and started for the scene of the blast, but the intense heat from the flames three blocks away drove me back.

MANGLED BODIES IN STREET

In a minute the blaze died down and I ran to the scene. Terrified people passed me on all sides, running as fast as their legs could carry them to get away from the place. I saw many persons lying in the street and fleeing from wrecked buildings horribly wounded.

At the foot of Beaver avenue, I saw a woman tugging vainly at the trouser leg of a man prostrate in a doorway with debris covering his head and shoulders. Someone came to her assistance and pulled the unfortunate victim to the street, only to find him badly crushed about the head and face. He looked as though he would die, although he was still breathing.

Many other sad sights greeted me all the way to Reedsdale street where flames were still flickering over what was left of the Equitable company's offices and shop buildings. The firemen soon arrived and in a little while, chaos was turned into order as police began establishing safety lines. It was the most terrible thing I have ever seen or expect to see.

for "the purchase of arms and munitions" for the Liberal Army of Nicaragua. There was no "Liberal Army" in the field at that time. It existed only in the minds of the Calles-Sacasa conspirators, who were plotting to overthrow the pro-American government of Nicaragua and replace it with one hostile to the United States which would fit into the general Bolshevik scheme and prevent the construction of the canal which this country must have for its national safety.

Heavy fighting broke out in Nicaragua in August of last year, some two months after the issuance on June 2 of the first Calles order financing the "Liberal" movement. The fighting was conducted with rifles and cartridges purchased with this and succeeding sums of money furnished by Calles, or furnished by the Mexican Government from its own military stores.

SECOND MONEY ORDER SIGNED ON NEXT DAY

The second order for a money payment to Zepeda was signed by Calles on June 3, 1926, one day later than the first. It was for fifty thousand pesos ($25,000), to be used by Zepeda for "expenses in the performance of a mission of a secret character confided to him by the Executive." Zepeda turned the money over to Sacasa, who was to head the proposed revolutionary movement, and Sacasa used it to establish a rebel "junta" in Guatemala City, and to finance the comings and goings of secret agents. Elsewhere the Sun-Telegraph publishes in fac-simile the Spanish text and signature of Calles to these two orders and of the Treasury Department orders issued to make them effective.

Two additional documents are reproduced, one signed by Calles himself and the other by M. O'Farril, private secretary to Alberto J. Pani, Secretary of the Treasury. They relate to a payment of 10,000 pesos ($5,000) which Calles ordered made to Dr. Carlos Leon, and which Pani made as ordered, but without signing the pay warrant himself.

VENEZUELAN REVOLUTION ALSO WAS PLANNED

Dr. Leon is a Venezuelan radical, virulently anti-American, who took an active part in organizing the Sacasa Liberal movement which was intended to overthrow the Conservative Nicaraguan Government, for the capital sin of friendship for the United States and favoring American construction of the proposed canal through Nicaraguan territory.

It was understood that, following the successful establishment of Sacasa in Nicaragua at the head of a Liberal Government subject to the orders of Calles, Leon was to organize a revolt in Venezuela, the government of that country being friendly to the United States and therefore objectionable to the Mexican Executive.

(Tomorrow documents published in the Hearst papers reveal financial steps taken by President Calles to support the Liberal Nicaraguan movement started by him in opposition to the United States. They also show the direct threat made by Calles "unless this program is carried out.")

Germany Rolling the Stone.
Artificial Rubber.
One Language Is Plenty.
No Socialism Needed.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1927).

ANCIENTS imagined unfortunate Sisyphus, rolling his stone up hill, only to have it roll back, then pushing it up again.

Germany is the 1927 Sisyphus, her heavy reparations bill is the stone—millions paid out and hundreds of millions to be paid.

If the "plan" goes on, Germany must pay in the year 1927-28 1,750,000,000 gold marks, or $437,000,000 odd, and each year thereafter $625,000,000 in gold.

THE world asks "can the thing be done, and if it can, will Germany do it, or find a way out, and what could the Allies, especially this nation, do about it if Germany should refuse the gigantic annual tribute?"

GERMANY, probably COULD pay. She saves the cost of a huge army and navy, permitted no longer. And hundreds of thousands that would be idle soldiers, living on workers, are now at work, helping Germany to undersell the rest of the world.

And Germany is ruled, now, by the brains of Germany, no longer by the decaying remainder of the ancient Hohenzollern money-lending family.

OF one thing be sure. Adversity is a good school. Germany has been through it and has graduated. Speculators now selling German industrial and bank stocks short will rue it.

RECENTLY this column, commenting on the alleged plan of Firestone and Ford to grow their own rubber, suggested that artificial rubber might come before the Ford-Firestone trees begin turning out tires.

TODAY Germany announces synthetic rubber, alleged to be made for less than natural rubber.

If Germans work at that as they did at aniline dyes, rubber plantations may go to join the extinct cochineal industry. And synthetic rubber may pay one-third of Germany's reparations.

PROF. TASSILO SCHULTHEISS teaches only Latin, Greek and religion, but knows seventy-seven languages, in addition to the Greek and Latin. Some discouraged might ask: "What's the use of my trying, when one man can know so much?"

A LEARNED gentleman says Socialism is back of Mexico's troubles, the same Socialism "that caused both the French and the Russian revolutions."

If Rousseau, Voltaire and the rest were Socialists they did not know it. The philosophical head of the League for Political Education could find political education in Taine's history of the "Ancient Regime."

FOR your comfort, remember that Homer, Dante and Shakespeare knew, each, only one living language and they are the three greatest writers. It's not how many languages you know, but what you have to say in some ONE language.

REAL revolutions are caused by facts, not theories, Socialist or otherwise. Misery, plus guiding intelligence, cause revolutions.

French peasants, so poor that they had to be forbidden by law to eat human bodies, dead of the plague, did not need Socialism to move them, when they found leadership.

SOME of our soldiers are being trained as veterinarians. A five-months' course, with 700 hours of study, teaches them the difference between glanders and a bog spavin.

HOW nice, if some of those soldiers could also be taught flying. Teaching soldiers to be veterinary surgeons now is like teaching civilians to drive a hansom cab—after the arrival of the taxi.

Russia teaches aviation in public schools, and has organized a body of 4,000,000 citizens directly interested in flying. That should interest "big money" and big money should order the government to change its veterinary school to a flying academy.

WILL ROGERS, rare combination of philosophy and wit, said he rode all day through one Kansas cornfield, and "this country is so busy gathering corn you can't get 'em to town to holler for relief."

SOME farmers may "holler" when they read of the relief scheme invented by big steel men. "Carnegie Steel" and other companies increase prices $1 a ton. The people will like it and pay it.

If farmers could add twenty-five cents a bushel, offhand, to the price of wheat or corn and make the people pay it and like it, they wouldn't need to "holler" for help.

MANOILESCU, who wanted to make Prince Carol king, in place of the child Michael, is "afraid Rumania is heading toward a republic."

That could hardly be much worse than the sort of government Rumania has had, depending on unsatisfactory accidents of birth.

To say the Rumanians couldn't govern themselves better than they have been governed may be true, but isn't much of a compliment to the Rumanians.

Quits Siege as Shots Come Too Close

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 14.—(AP.)—The hum of shotgun slugs about his home last night brought John Norsinski to the point of deciding that he did not care to hold up his end of an all-night siege with state troopers and New York Central Railroad police. He surrendered to police, who sought his arrest for an attempt to shoot his wife.

Mrs. Norsinski told police she fled from their home when her husband returned in an intoxicated condition and seized a rifle with which he announced he would kill her. With her, as she dashed from the house, was a 4-year-old son. She was forced to leave a second son, an infant, in the house.

ITS lineup improved considerably over that of last year, the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie basketball team is going to make a determined bid for the Commercial-Industrial League championship this winter. More than 20 candidates responded to Coach Herman Strahl's first call for players, all of last year's regulars returning.

Last year's regulars who are back include McDermott, center; Williams, Bianni and Brandau, forwards, and Bubbles and Beckfield, guards. Besides these regulars, P. & L. E. has signed Black, captain of the Edgewood High team of 1925; Schuckerman, last year with South Hills High; LeMark, a member of the P. & O. League last winter, and Otley and Williams, of the McKees Rocks Business Men.

Coach Strahl is driving his players in the early workouts and indications are that the team will be in excellent shape for the opening league battle.

SCHEDULED to meet the Pittsburgh Silents in their opening Central League contest, at Foresters Hall, Thursday, November 25, Carl Carlson, coach and star center of the M. G. Leslies, is driving his charges in effort to get them into first-class condition. Carlson will have at his command this winter the same team that wore the colors of the Dad Beigle five last year. With such stars as Carlson, Schofield, Beigle, Bryant, Ochs, Brown, Mohn and Mason, the Leslies should go far in the Central League race this winter.

Besides competing in the Central League, the Leslies will meet the leading amateur quintets operating in this vicinity. Games at home and abroad are desired. Write Manager Art Ritenbaugh, 263 Fisk street.

THREE clubs are bidding for the eighth berth in the Allegheny County League, last year one of the best professional circuits operating hereabouts. The race for this franchise has narrowed down to the Beaver Grays, Carnegie American League and Broadway Club of Beechview. Mickey Gross, former star of the Morrys, will lead the Broadway passers this winter. Followers of professional basketball are awaiting with interest the opening of this strong circuit.

DRIBBLES

Owing to the inability of the schedule committee to meet, there will be no meeting of the Pittsburgh and Ohio Valley League tonight. Members will be notified when the schedule will be ratified.

Basketball meetings are scheduled every night this week in Kaufmann's, at which time schedules will be adopted. Teams desiring berths are asked to call Atlantic 1990-J4 at once.

Big Crowds Watch Frays

By TOM BIRKS

WITH Carrick Odds defeating West View by a 6 to 3 score; McChesneytown stopping Christy Park, 14 to 0; C. M. C. downing Rox A. A., 6 to 0, and the Port Vue-Ryans game finishing in a deadlock with only two quarters finished, gridiron fans saw plenty of action in the mythical race for titular honors Sunday. Stirring action marked the playing of all the battles, with record-breaking crowds lining the fields.

Jakne Bohren, erstwhile Pitt luminary, flashed some of his collegiate training when he hurled a great pass into the waiting arms of Concrete, Carrick Odds star, that saw the passing of West View's great gridiron machine from the list of contenders for the mythical championship of the sandlots. But while Carrick was fighting their way to victory with 5,000 fans in a frenzy, Port Vue Quakers and the Ryans of Hazelwood, the other undefeated clubs, had to call the game when the great crowd got beyond control and Referee Robinson called hostilities off for the day.

At Lovatt Plan, McKeesport, Cy McGinnies brought his McChesneytown aggregation to meet Christy Park. Seven thousand fans watched this battle finishing with the Latrobe team on the right end of a 14 to 0 score.

The defeat of West View stunned the crowd. Klinzing and Mose Kelsch could not do a thing with the Odds line, its only score came when Kelsch booted a field goal from placement in the third quarter. Jakie Bohren staged his act with Concrete on the receiving end, and with the ball on the three-yard mark Kaltez plunged over. West View staged a do-or-die effort with two minutes to go, and had the ball on the two-yard line but Boots hurled a pass that was intercepted.

The McChesneytown-Christy Park game was a thriller and it was a wonderful gridiron machine that the fans saw win. Manager Dorsey has a wonderful team, but McGinnies' club had the edge.

An estimated crowd of 7,000 watched the Port Vue-Ryan game. It was seen at the start that the game could not possibly be finished. The Port Vue field will not hold crowds of that size and the referee soon found himself clearing the field after every play.

The only score came from a placement early in the game. And when the second half of the game started it was 5 o'clock and practically dark. A playoff will have to be staged to get a winner from these two well-matched clubs, but the game will have to be staged on some other lot.

When the game terminated, Ryans had the ball, first and ten, on the Port Vue six-yard line, within easy scoring distance, but Robinson decided to call the game. This was the only logical thing to do, as it should have been done earlier in the game, for the conditions were not fair to either team.

Knute Rockne Lauds Play of Army Team

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—"The Army played heads-up football and deserved to win," said Head Coach Knute Rockne of the Notre Dame team as he walked out of the Yankee Stadium after the game Saturday. Rockne said it wasn't Notre Dame's day and that it was a clean-cut decision.

"We fired our best at them, but the Army fired back just a little harder," Rockne added. "The Army was alert and took advantage of every opportunity. Wait until next year."

WHITEY HAGAN, Pitt's other halfback, who shared the big honors with Gibby Welch in last Saturday's fine victory over Nebraska at the stadium, was knocked out standing up when he had to leave the game after contributing his share to the triumph by making a 63-yard run through a broken field for the Panthers' second touchdown and tossing a 21-yard pass to Welch in midfield for the third tally.

A kick in the face, accidental, of course, scrambled Hagan's senses. Capt. Welch sought to determine just how fit Whitey was before having him relieved. Hagan's groggy condition was evident, but Gibby resorted to the time-honored test. Holding up three fingers in front of Hagan's face, he yelled:

"How many fingers are there?"

Hagan stared back blankly, not even comprehending the question, and Gibby ordered a substitute forthwith. Hagan might have gone on to the finish of the game, playing automatically. Others have done it and not made any mistakes, nor remembered anything afterward of what transpired while they were in the well-known "fog," but there's no sense in taking unnecessary chances.

IT IS DIFFICULT to conceive of such a highly-touted and otherwise powerful eleven as the University of Nebraska's machine being so lacking in perfection of fundamental play as the Cornhuskers showed in their poor tackling in the open against the Panthers on Saturday. Only one other team, Carnegie Tech, has scored on Pitt this season, and it tallied only once, while Nebraska marched almost half the length of the field twice for touchdowns and always was dangerous with its powerful offensive. Under ordinary conditions those two tallies should have been sufficient to win, and the Huskers have their poor defensive play in their opponents' territory to thank for their defeat. Pitt made its three touchdowns on runs of 93 yards from kickoff, 63 yards from scrimmage and 71 yards on a forward pass play. Nebraska tacklers had chances to bring down every one of the Panther touchdown ball carriers, but made only feeble attempts to reach them. Its men merely reached out and scarcely touched the runners with their finger tips and, missing, fell to the ground out of the play. Such poor, high tackling seldom is seen in these parts. When Pitt, Carnegie Tech, Wash.-Jeff., Penn State and other teams in this section tackle runners they STAY tackled! There is no lackadaisical grabbing for the man with the ball and letting George do it if he should happen to get away.

PITT played a whale of a game, an inspired one, in fact, and richly merited the victory; but, somehow, we can't refrain from wondering what the reaction would be if the shoe were on the other foot and the Panthers had lost as Nebraska did, with such a mediocre exhibition of alleged tackling in the open field. The grandstand coaches certainly would be on Dr. Sutherland and his aides now, and how! Proving once again that the football elevens of Western Pennsylvania are among the best-coached in the land and the competition hereabouts is as keen as anywhere.

WITH the elimination of Princeton, through its defeat by Yale, Pitt and Wash.-Jeff., both undefeated and tied only once, by each other in a scoreless game, again stand out as the leading candidates for Eastern honors. Wash-Jeff has little to worry about in its sole remaining game, with West Virginia, on Thanksgiving Day, but Pitt still has a tough battle on its hands in the fighting Penn State aggregation, which threatens to pull another great "comeback" following its 13-13 tie with New York University Saturday.

The present campaign will go into the records as the most successful of Dr. Sutherland's regime at Pitt to date, whether or not the team wins general recognition as the outstanding team of the season in the East. Playing as it did against Nebraska it might have beaten any eleven in the country last Saturday.

THE third meeting between Phil Goldstein and Tommy Crowley, those two keen local junior-lightweight fistic rivals, at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, will be over the 10-round route. As pointed out in this column recently, eight rounds has proved insufficient to establish the superiority of either lad. A great rally by Crowley earned him a slight shade in the first clash and a similar rally by Goldstein evened up the second, in which a draw decision was rendered. Two more rounds in either battle would have definitely decided the issue either way, and now the fans will get a chance to see the pair travel over the regulation main bout route.

NEWELL W. BANKS, for 18 consecutive years national checker champion, is in town today for exhibitions at Dimling's, 536 Smithfield street, playing 100 points of pocket billiards and six blindfold checker matches simultaneously. He has been doing this stunt for a long time and getting away with it famously. It's all a matter of concentration and memorizing the boards as he goes along. He says he plays better this way than he does when strolling around sizing up the boards, for in the latter case he is apt to become careless. Speedy calculation counts a great deal, for moves must be figured out far ahead. He doesn't use the same formations on all of the boards. He meets all manner of opponents and drops about one game in two thousand. Frequently he plays draws.

Banks owes his checker wizardry to defective eyesight when he was young. He wanted to study chemistry, but his eyes were too weak for the grind, and he had a lot of time to devote to playing checkers. Constant practice and stiff competition made him a champion and he now stands out along with Willie Hoppe and a few others who have held titles over a long span of years. Noise doesn't bother him, so keen is his power of concentration. That is why he can play billiards and still keep his mind on six games of checkers without looking at the boards. His exhibitions today are scheduled for 3 and 8:15 p. m.

W. & J. PREPARES FOR W. VA.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Nov. 14.—Coach Andy Kerr, following Saturday's victory over Bucknell, will give the Wash-Jeff players no rest in his plans to prepare for the Thanksgiving Day game with West Virginia. The Presidential squad got back here yesterday from Lewisburg and Kerr will at once begin his final program for the concluding clash of the season, having called practice for this afternoon.

Wash-Jeff players came through the contest with the Eastern Pennsylvania Bisons in good condition and Kerr will be able to groom his men for the Mountaineers with the full strength of the squad available. Several of the Red and Black performers were banged up considerably Saturday, Amos with a bump on his head being perhaps the worst hurt. But he is expected to be O. K. in a day or two and the others will participate in the workout today.

BABE RUTH AS HERO -:- IN RAGS TO RICHES ROLE -:- FIRST PENNILESS, NOW RICH

Penniless Orphan in 1914 to FOLLOW THE MONEY LINE ⟹ $180,000 A Year in 1927

Here's the unknown, loose-jointed, angular orphan boy playing ball on the Baltimore back-lots. Babe looked much like this the day Jack Dunn came to the parochial school and signed him to play ball for the stupendous sum of $25 a week.

Here's the Babe a few years later, just breaking into the headlines as a pitcher for the Red Sox. He's bigger and stronger now, and he has begun to learn what it's all about. But the dream of real greatness is still to unfold.

And here's the Babe as he looked six years ago when he set the whole world agog by slashing out 50 homers. Life was joyous for Babe in those days, and he sometimes forgot that training was a big part of baseball's business.

But he paid the toll. Here you see the Babe as he looked in the hospital, broken and sick, the victim of his own folly. "He'll never come back," the wiseacres said, "he's through now." But the Babe had faith in himself. He wouldn't give up.

And so, from a bed in the hospital, he once more rose to the heights—the greatest he had yet attained. Here he is signing his famous name to a contract that calls for $70,000 a year, the highest salary ever paid any man in baseball. It's the start toward the $180,000 earnings of 1927. Is he worth it? Ask Col. Ruppert!

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

FOOTBALL fandom throughout this region still feels a tingle in every nerve from the effects of last Saturday's big thriller at the Pitt Stadium.

"More thrills than were produced by the entire world series and all previous games on the local gridiron schedule this year combined," was the general verdict.

With a 93-yard run by Gibby Welch from the kickoff for a touchdown; a 62-yard dash to the goal line by Jimmy Hagan on a cut-in past the Nebraska right end; another sensational run for a touchdown by Welch on a pass from Hagan, in which pass and run totaled 76 yards; an exhibition of terrific driving power by the giant Westerners that for a time threatened to crush the Blue and Gold, and some see-saw scoring that kept Panther rooters bobbing about excitedly between hope and despair, surely made the game a classic for thrills and sensational spectacles.

THERE has been no tingler like it here since 1920, when the crippled Tommy Holleran, and Tommy Davies came back into the game near the finish and, with the aid of Tiny Hewitt, turned seemingly certain defeat into victory against Georgia Tech.

NEBRASKA officials, after Saturday's game, expressed the utmost admiration for the Pitt line. "It was one of the lightest we have played against this year," they said, "and easily the best. We had had only four earned first downs scored against our line in previous six games this year, most of them with strong opponents, and we had not failed to pile up a huge yardage against every other line.

"But the Pitt boys, after the first 10 minutes, outjumped our line, which we consider the strongest part of our team, and they are a mighty smart lot, too."

Special praise was given by the Nebraskans to the work of Bill Kern, Pitt's star lineman, whom they pronounce the equal of any tackle they have seen anywhere.

PERHAPS no feature of Saturday's game has been more commented on, in the countless discussions that followed this memorable combat, than the remarkably brilliant tackling of the Pitt eleven as a whole, a feature of the Panthers' play which has been especially notable all season, and, in fact, since Dr. Sutherland took charge of the team in 1924.

The mighty Cornhusker backs, who played the unusual distance of nine to ten yards behind their own line for the purpose of adding impetus to their weight when they struck the Pitt line—a poor system that eventually failed—were brought down in their tracks again and

1927 GAME MAY BE LAST

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(UP.)—The thousands of football fans who annually look to the Army-Navy game to furnish them the climax of the football season may see the two service elevens in action for the last times this year.

A serious break over the eligibility question threatens following the refusal of the Army athletic officials to agree to a Navy proposal.

The Navy recently made a ruling that no man who has played over three years on any varsity eleven can hope for a chance on the Navy team and has furthered the move to include the Army, but such a move will not be considered, according to Biff Jones, Army coach.

Coach Bill Ingram, of the Navy, has been trying to enforce such a rule for several years and he declares that the rule will go into effect next year despite the Army's indifference.

"We are not going to adopt any such rule," Jones said. "We are not making an effort to complete in the collegiate field. The Military Academy does not solicit star football players, but in case these men come to our institution through the regular channels of appointment and examination, we welcome them."

Ingram proposes to call the athletic officials of the two schools together in an effort to convince Jones of the justice of the proposal and if this is unsuccessful it may take an arbitration board from the departments to keep the service game alive.

Pirates' Lineup Set for First Game

MANAGER ODIE CLEGHORN today announced the lineup that will be pitted against the Detroit Cougars in the opening hockey game of the season at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night. The Pirate leader will start Ty Arbour at left wing, Hib Milks at center, Harold Darragh, right wing; Charley Langlois, right defense; Johnny McKinnon, left defense, and Roy Worters in the nets.

This is the same starting lineup that played most of the games last season, and, according to Cleghorn, the makeup of his starting combination looms as one of the best in the circuit.

On the secondary line, Herb Drury will be played at center, Harold Cotton at left wing and Tex White, right wing, leaving Mickey McGuire and Duke McCurry to fill in on the forward line, and Rog Smith for relief duty on the defense.

The Bucs wound up their preliminary training period with a long and strenuous session yesterday afternoon. It was after the final workout that Cleghorn made his selection.

In discussing the forward lines, the Pirate chief said that one appeared to be almost as good as the other, and it is his intention to work the secondary line as often as the first line of offense. Arbour, Milks and Darragh form a strong and experienced line, one with clever backchecking ability, as well as offensive ability.

Goose Hangs High for Ruth; Earned $180,000 in 1927

By FORD C. FRICK

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Thirteen years ago, a gangling, loose-jointed orphan kid in a Baltimore industrial school stepped out of the school office after a conference with the headmaster.

He tossed his cap in the air and turned a couple of handsprings. He gave a whoop that might have disturbed the senatorial minds of all Washington.

He was the happiest kid in the world at that particular moment. For he had just signed a contract to play baseball at $25 a week; $25 a week for "havin' fun."

Yesterday the same "kid," older now and wiser and much bigger, sat in the living room of an uptown apartment house and cast up his accounts for the year ending November first.

He grinned as he labored with the pencil. And he had a right to grin. For that $25 a week salary that looked so big 11 years ago was grown as if by magic into $180,000 for the past 12 months.

Let Oliver Optic and the optimistic Mr. Alger tie that one!

Of course, you've guessed it. The kid of 11 years ago and the "kid" of yesterday—one and the same at heart—is Mr. George Herman Ruth.

REAL, SOLID DOUGH

And the $180,000 represents, in round figures, his earnings for the past 12 months. Not motion pictures' dollars, those, either—but real, hard clinking simoleons that will pass for par across the counter of Uncle Sam's counting house.

Here's the way it was earned:

Salary with Yankees	$70,000
World series share	5,500
Newspaper articles	25,000
Barnstorming share	30,000
Picture, "Babe Comes Home"	50,000

Small wonder that Mr. Ruth, smoking his morning cigar after a hearty breakfast, opines that "baseball is a pretty good business."

The above doesn't represent the whole of Mr. Ruth's earnings, either. He's clipping dividend coupons on "Babe" Ruth underwear and "Babe" Ruth candy. He's on the payroll of a sporting goods house as an exploiter of sports products. Recently he made a phonograph record, in co-operation with Lou Gehrig, and this bit of "canned amusement" is paying off in round silver dollars—lots of 'em.

During the recent barnstorming trip he obliged a certain overall manufacturer by posing for a photograph in overalls—and his generosity was rewarded with a check for $3,000; a check that didn't bounce the fraction of an inch when Babe shoved it across the marble counter.

BABE'S SAVIN' NOW

And mark this down.

The kid of 11 years ago, who tossed his magnificent $25 to the winds on each pay day, is getting smart.

He's saving his money.

Being ever a kid at heart, carefree and generous and trusting, saving didn't come easy. At times Christy Walsh, who is his adviser and helper, gave up all hope. But he persisted.

And today Mr. George Herman

Ray Shafer, Lawrenceville middleweight, meets Willie Ptomey, Army champion of Baltimore, in a 10-round bout at Cumberland tonight. Joey LaGrey of Johnstown, is on the same card with Sylvan Bass of Baltimore.

Joe Glick and Jack Bernstein meet in the main event of a card of four 10-round battles in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight. The balance of the program follows: Andy Divodi vs. Hilario Martinez, Sammy Vogel vs. Bruce Flowers, and Johnny Indrisano vs. Clyde Hull.

Tony Canzoneri, leading contender for the featherweight championship, and Red Chapman travel 10 heats in Boston tonight.

Milwaukee is after a bout between Cuddy DeMarco, who recently won on a foul over Harry Kahn there, and Frankie Schaefer.

Tommy Ryan, former McKeesport bantamweight headliner, now hailing from Buffalo, meets Andy Tomosky of Wilmerding in the main bout at McKeesport Thursday night.

Petsy Gallagher returns to the ring after a long absence next Monday night when he boxes U. S. Carpentier in one of the six-round preliminaries to the second return bout between Tommy Crowley and Phil Goldstein at Motor Square Garden.

BUD TAYLOR FLEW IN PLANE

The bantamweight champion boxed Johnny Farr in Los Angeles the other night and after the bout was handed a telegram telling of the critical illness of his recently divorced wife, Mrs. Iris Taylor, in Terre Haute, Ind. He immediately chartered an airplane and began to journey back home. He was stricken with air sickness and had to quit the plane at Salt Lake City and go the remainder of the way by train, and when he reached Terre Haute he found his former wife recovering. Now a reconciliation looms. The former Mrs. Taylor and the small child of the couple, Barbara, are pictured above.

Ex-Buccaneer Slugger Leads A. A. Hitters

The bat of the former Bucco was held to 10 homers, but Reb was a consistent hitter all the way.

VICTORY OVER NEBRASKA BOOSTS PRESTIGE

By JESS CARVER.

CERTAIN to receive major consideration from the Tournament of Roses committee when it comes to awarding the annual Eastern bid to the Rose Bowl, and riding high, wide and handsome at the head of the Eastern title-pursuing pack, the Golden Panthers of Pitt sat back today and modestly acknowledged the compliments and thanks of the East for their splendid triumph of Saturday over Nebraska.

Pitt and the Army, both of which turned back major mid-Western invasions, and turned them back in such a manner as to leave no doubts as to the superiority of the Eastern elevens, provided the major upsets of the week-end. Both entered the game on the short end, and both came out winners—and how.

The Rose Bowl committee can hardly do anything else than bid Pitt to come West and show its wares against the pick of the Pacific. Of course, Yale may be asked, but the Eli have already intimated that the invitation would be refused. Wash-Jeff might be asked, but the record of the Presidents is hardly as impressive as is Pitt's. All Pitt needs now is to beat State, and all will be well.

Today there are five teams in the race for the national title. In addition to Pitt, these are Yale, Illinois, Georgia and Minnesota. The Far West can contribute only California, and this team is almost certain to be beaten by Stanford next Saturday, despite the Trojan's unexpected walloping at the hands of Little Santa Clara. Pop Warner won't leave his team another Saturday and go watch someone else play. While the cat was away, the mice played—havoc.

No one was any louder in praise of the Panthers after Saturday's game than the Nebraska players. Presnell, touted and deservedly so, Cornhusker halfback, said that Pitt was the best drilled, smartest and most dangerous eleven he had ever seen. He commented specially on the way in which they nailed him as he caught the punts, and said he'd never been tackled so hard in his life as Fox, Kern, Donchess and other Panther stars nailed him.

"Boy, when those babies hit you, you stay hit. My legs were numb, actually numb, at half time. They don't tackle high around here, they break your leg every time they hit you—and they hit you plenty."

PRAISE FOR KERN

That is what Presnell thinks of the Pitt players. Ray Randels, as good a tackle as there is in the country, and who has already been bid to accompany the All-Eastern team that is to play an All-Western eleven on the coast, said he was going to ask that Bill Kern be selected to play the other side of the line.

"If Kern plays one tackle, and I play the other, I'll guarantee that there won't be much gaining through those positions. Kern is the best tackle I've played against in my four years at Nebraska, and I'm tickled to

Local Cue League Set

THE newly-organized Pittsburgh Three-Cushion Billiard League will open its season Wednesday. Officers and players of the league, which is the first three-rail circuit ever formed locally, met yesterday in Charley Ellis' Diamond street room, fixed the amount of prizes, adopted rules and arranged a schedule for the first two weeks. Secretary Ellis will complete the season schedule next week.

The prize money is to be divided as follows: First prize, $250; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $75; fifth, $60; sixth, $50; seventh, $35; eighth, $25, with a prize of $30 for the high run of the season.

E. Z. Wainwright, president of the league, and any other player rated as an amateur, will be awarded medals in lieu of cash prizes.

The scheduled games, with the handicaps of the players, are:

WEDNESDAY

Robert Carter, 45, of Kalmar's, vs. E. Z. Wainwright, 45, Rudy's at Kalmar's.

William Eichemiller, of Rudy's, 45, vs. Henry Jones, Kenny's, 50, at Rudy's.

William Greenwood, 50, Ellis', vs. Eddie Smith, 40, Dimling's, at Ellis.

THURSDAY

FRIDAY

Jones vs. Carter at Kenny's.

SATURDAY

Smith vs. Pitfield at Dimling's.

by HAVEY BOYLE

HAVEY BOYLE

OBVIOUSLY, on Olympus on this particular morning there was a spirit of unrest among the gods. Even the age-old argument over Helen of Troy, whose face had launched a thousand ships, failed to appeal. Thersites, once thrashed by Ulysses, rubbed a sore head reminiscently — and chafed. Mars, still angry at Minerva, after all these years, smoked one cigaret after another—restlessly. Imperious Jove had lost some of his geniality. Juno, who had favored the Greeks over the Trojans, found little solace bedecked as she was with beautiful immortal clothes and the borrowed ear-rings with the lovely gem-stones. Even great Jupiter, head of them all, speculating whether he had acted wisely in that ancient affair involving Juno, Venus, Minerva, and young Paris, asked for another cup of coffee and a black cigar. As a matter of fact the whole gang of them were in a he—ll of a mood.

IT WAS apparent that something might be done to relieve the strain, to remove the monotony. Too long had many of the gods reminisced over the siege of Troy and its attendant excitement and Mars had just now remarked: "If I hear another word about Ajax, Diomed, Nestor, Hector, or Agamemnon I'm going to ask Jove to lend me a bolt of lightning with which to rap on the coko the guilty party. In truth, I'm fed up with nearly everything."

"Let us, then," said one of the minor gods, "amuse ourselves with the strange earthlings today."

"But they are not interesting," objected Venus, fixing a curl.

"Well," persisted the one who had the first suggestion, "let's do the best we can to produce another epic."

And so on the afternoon of that drowsy, restless morning on Olympus, the Pitt Panthers played Nebraska, with, apparently, Olympus directing the event so as to produce the greatest possible enjoyment that can come from football.

IT IS not difficult to believe that on Olympus as the Pitt-Nebraska game started there was the usual rift among the powerful people of mythology. As they had split in the Greek-Trojan war, so likely was there some disagreement as to whether the great Panthers or the great Cornhuskers should win. Was that entirely earthly, for instance, that 93-yard run by Gibby Welch? And was it possible for the great Pitt line to resemble so much loose sawdust as Nebraska crashed through easily for their first touchdown without Nebraska's having a powerful ally among those whose feet dangled from Olympus as they watched? Apparently one in the Olympian gallery, favoring Pitt, and had demanded that that light-haired boy, sitting on the bench, a boy named Andy Salata, should be called into play. That was a shrewd stroke for the side favoring Pitt, catching unawares the gods who had favored Nebraska.

IT seemed commonplace enough to hear that Wasmuth was being replaced by Salata, but it was an event that somehow turned greatly the complexion of the conflict. True, towering Kern in the line, sly Fox Roberts and Cutler were dripping with gore as they offered to stand to the last with the field marshal, Welch, and good Hagan, when all seemed lost, including the surrender of the uniforms, but somehow when wine-haired Salata ran as rapidly as he could from the bench, and crouched in the line, there was a visible brace to the whole team.

Throughout the campaign, until the last dying moments, the artillery of Presnell and Howell showered those Panthers with a fire that was the worst ever experienced by a Pitt team, but Salata had avoided sunken roads to reach his beleaguered comrades in time to turn what seemed like most certain and even humiliating defeat into what was beyond doubt the most glorious football victory in Pitt's history and one of the greatest in the whole annals of the game.

WELCH of the light horse, glided first, scrambled, maneuvered, and then at last free shot like a streak of the blue to the goal line. A few steps behind was a fast running Nebraskan, but after five yards of this the Nebraskan fell hopeless behind. Only Paddock would have reached Gibby then. Then Hagan, the dragoon, heard the call. It was a tie score when Hagan galloped free. He was close to the boundary line. Would he be forced out of bounds as he moved on and on? Well, if he isn't forced out then he cannot evade that lurking red-jersey even now bearing down on him. But Whitey keeps moving and relief comes from a Pitt sniper ready to hit as Sutherland has droned and droned to them to hit. Over topples that lingering red-jersey and Whitey keeps a galloping. But Whitey is tiring and there are still two white lines to make before the precious goal is reached. He can't make it for there is speedy Presnell pursuing hotly. No, Whitey must go down for Presnell is about to reach him. But Hagan keeps a galloping and Presnell, seeing Hagan only five yards away, is tempted to fly at him, leave the ground to make up time, but Whitey plods on and on. Those last five yards were a whole mile, eh, Whitey boy, with that touchdown in sight that will put your team ahead? At last Whitey staggers over the goal line.

GOB MUST REST UP FIST A MONTH

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—The heavyweight match scheduled Friday night at Madison Square Garden between Jack Sharkey, of Boston, and Tom Heeney, New Zealander, was called off today as a result of an injury to Sharkey's left hand. An X-ray examination in Boston today revealed a fracture. Sharkey will be unable to fight before January.

Sharkey was examined in Boston today by his own as well as the Massachusetts Boxing Commission's physician. Three X-ray photographs were taken, revealing an "incomplete fracture" of the small finger of the left hand. It will take a month's rest and then two more weeks of training before Sharkey is able to fight again, his manager told Rickard.

Sharkey hurt his hand while in training for what was to have been his first "comeback" attempt here since being knocked out by Jack Dempsey last July.

SOCCER

by TOM BIRKS

Soccer fans saw plenty of action with the West Penn and national competition staging cup ties in the district Sunday. The leading game found Pittsburgh defeating their rivals from Mustard Hollow by a 2 to 0 score. The Pittsburgh defense must have found itself, keeping the Hollow boys from breaking the ice. Without question, Pittsburgh has the best club around for the national race, and now with all the locals eliminated, bring on the Michigan and Ohio teams.

The German Sport Club lived up to the reputation made during the past few weeks of being one of the greatest scoring machines in the district. Sunday the Sport boys scored five goals through the McKeesport Tube defense and this is not a mean trick. Bill Montgomery's club could not break down the Zetal defense. Watch the Germans in the West Penn championship race.

Just why a replay could be ordered on the evidence is beyond the writer. When the Celtics were leading by one goal, were awarded a penalty kick, from which it was possible to score. The kick was not allowed to be taken by the Pittsburgh players, and yet they get a replay. It seems as if President Carson and the council as a whole will have to get into the case, or else a precedent is going to be established that will be a detriment to the game.

One of the finds of the season in the Scottish Clan League is Constable, now playing on the wing for the Corinthians. The old Homestead boy is flashing plenty of speed and scoring plenty of goals, which is quite an asset for an outside player. Constable won the game against Cameron's great rivals, the McPhersons, on Saturday, with two good goals.

DOYLE

for 164 games, Bobby led the league in driving in tallies with a total of 145. He was a big gun for Casey Stengel in the winning of the A. A. flag.

Frank Emmer, sturdy little shortstop, who could not satisfy the Redland management, furnished many of the hitting high spots in the Hickey circuit. Emmer set the pace with homers by slamming out 32 full-distance swats. On the other hand, Frank set a new league record for fanning by striking out 79 times. Apparently the boy was having his "cuts."

Herman Layne, West Virginia boy, who came to the Pirates from Toronto of the International League, played the pasture for Indianapolis and batted .325 in 123 games. Layne has been recalled by the Buccos and is on the reserve list of the team.

Fred Nicholson, a Buccaneer for a spell about nine years ago, had a good season for the Kansas City club. Fred played in 167 contests, he scoring 100 runs and batting .320. Elmer Yoter, Pittsburgh boy and Indianapolis third baseman, who was purchased by the Cubs, batted .310 in 114 games.

Emmer, with his record of homers and strikeouts, also led the league in runs scored, with 154 to his credit.

RUTH

Ruth can smile at the world. He's got plenty. He's out of debt. He has a bank account. He has investments that guarantee him a regular income as long as he lives. And the capacity for earning is still with him.

That's why Babe is taking things easy this winter. He knows he can afford it. And he's earned a rest. The best part of it is that his hat size is the same today as it was 11 years ago; his smile is just as big and broad; his voice as cheery and as wholesome.

Quite a boy, this Ruth.

As likeable, as friendly and as carefree now as he was that day 11 years ago when he tossed his hat in the air and turned handsprings across the lawn of the Baltimore Industrial School over a $25 a week salary for "havin' fun."

Yale Is Crippled After Princeton Victory

By Universal Service.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 14.—Yale's great victory over Princeton may have proved costly. Capt. Bill Webster and Field General Johnny Hoben may be unable to start the Harvard game next Saturday. They were found suffering from injuries yesterday which may require more than a week to heal. They were removed to the infirmary.

Elmer Keil will take Capt. Webster's position at right guard.

SPORT COMMENT

again, the only exceptions being the occasional instance when Presnell, "the runaway boxcar," dragged two or three Pitt lads along with him.

AT that, Presnell more than once was cut down as though with a scythe, this being particularly noticeable when he essayed to run back kicks. Hagan and Cutler, on their punts, got the ball down field with enough height to give the fleet Panther linemen a chance to cover, and how those linemen smeared the scarlet-clad receivers.

Fox and Robertson like Kern, stood out in this department of play, as usual. Fox's play was as good as has been seen hereabouts this season.

Presnell is acclaimed the best back, other than Welch, to appear at the Stadium this year. He, like the great Gibby, is playing his third and last year of the college game. His power is tremendous, and he has a faculty of checking his flight and changing direction. Pittsburghers have rarely seen a player of his all-around ability, and he will long be remembered here.

He has a great running mate in Howell, who is even more dependable at straight line-bucking.

CUTLER'S well-timed, accurate passing again stood out in contrast to that of the visiting center, who time and again put his backs into difficulty with his uncertain heaves.

Pitt never has had a center whose passing was more consistently good than Andy's has been this season, and he has been a tower of strength in all respects, justly winning recognition as a worthy unit in a long line of great pivot men at the local university—a line including such names as Jack Turner, Bob Peck, Charley Bowser, Marsh Johnson and others.

COACH SUTHERLAND was unquestionably right in assigning Tom Parkinson the quarterback post in the continued absence of the injured Edwards and Fisher, for the bulk and power of the hard-fighting Monongahela Valley boy was needed against the huge, fast-moving Westerners.

Parkinson played a much better game than he did against W. & J. However, Pitt suffered a severe handicap in the last two games through the lack of a quarterback fast enough to get out and clear the way for Welch, as both Edwards and Fisher do when given opportunity.

PITT players say the left side of the Nebraska line, presided over by Holm and Richards, was much harder to get out of the road than the other side, and that these are two of the best linemen the Panthers have seen this season.

The Blue and Gold wearers also praise highly Howell, who shared with Presnell the ball-carrying responsibilities, and Witte, the forward passer who went in during the fourth quarter.

They believe, however, that the Western ends failed to compare with Donchess and Guarino, who have outplayed all opposing ends this fall. It was noted by a man on Saturday that Nebraska did not do much around the ends, confining its efforts to off-tackle charges, on which it developed tremendous power.

Nebraskans after the game explained that some of the drives intended to go around the ends were forced in by Donchess and Guarino, who refused to be circled and turned inside some plays that were originally meant to go wide.

THE Cornhuskers made splendid use of a quick kick, which was an especially sound play in view of the Panther defense. Coach Sutherland, recognizing the power of the Nebraska running attack, had brought his backs close up behind the line, even the halves being only 15 yards behind the line of scrimmage.

Another commendable point in the visitors' play was their defense against the Panthers' passes, which obviously had been well scouted. The visitors intercepted five of the 10 throws, an unusual percentage.

Pitt's defense against passes was rather good, too, while Hagan was in, but after his injury the Pitt backs were inclined to let the runner get beyond them on the long passes. This might have proved fatal had the tosser been a little more accurate in some instances.

New Job For Farrell

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., Nov. 14.—Johnny Farrell, one of the most brilliant of golf professionals, has been signed as pro of the country club here, it was announced by Romas E. Byron, manager of the local course.

death he was on the other side of the line most of the time."

The Panthers did look good, and they played the sort of football that cannot be beaten. A fighting team is always hard to lick, and a good fighting team can't be licked. Joe Schwartzer, backfield coach at New York University, who was scouting Nebraska, told me that Pitt was easily the best eleven in the East—far superior to any of the Big Three and he even admitted that they'd probably beat New York.

Penn State, the Panthers' next hurdle, and a tough one, too, will have to be better than they have been all season if they expect to drop Pitt. Good as their offense is, and clever and crafty as is Johnny Roepke, the Lion line isn't the best in the East by far and takes a mighty good line to beat the Panthers. Pitt has a good defense against aerial attacks, and so far, no team has been able to throw passes and get away with them against the Pitt first string lineup. Nebraska foozled 11 before they completed one, and only succeeded when Pitt had five or six second string men in the ball game.

WATCH PENN STATE

But the Pitt-State game this year will be one of the greatest of all time—with so many players on both sides playing their final games, and with Pitt fighting for an undefeat record, the eastern title and the western bid. State, defeated once and tied once, can erase both with a victory over Pitt. Buy your tickets now.

Events in the tri-state district went pretty much as was expected, though the 25-12 punch on the whiskers that Westminster handed Thiel was hardly according to Hoyle. Geneva found Allegheny stubborn but helpless against Bo McMillin's powerfully attacking Covenanters and won, 39-0, scoring three touchdowns in each half of the ball game.

Grove City rode roughshod over St. Francis. West Virginia was pressed to the limit by Cam Henderson's Scarlet Hurricane and Wash-Jeff met the challenge of Bucknell and whipped Snavley's Bisons 13-0, sort of spoiling the dedicatory services of Bucknell's stadium.

Carnegie Tech and Duquesne, idle Saturday after their respective actions Friday against Waynesburg and Western Reverse, pardon, Reserve, rested up and cheered Pitt's victory in the stadium.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—With only a trickle of new offerings to afford competition at the beginning of the week, prices of listed bonds were again buoyant in today's market. Mortgages of railroad companies, the floating supply of which has been materially reduced by recent investment buying, again displayed a firm tendency, several issues such as Missouri Pacific 4s, Canadian Pacific 4s and Burlington 4½s showing moderate activity at or just under their year's high prices.

Demand for some industrial liens also was rather brisk. Julius Kayser 5½s, advancing more than a point, reached 107 for the first time, and American Writing Paper 6s changed hands in fair volume around 95, their previous peak. International Telephone 4½s touched their 1927 maximum, but later relinquished the fractional gain.

The foreign obligations failed to establish a definite trend. French bonds yielded fractionally to realizing, while firmness prevailed in the Italian group. Good Hope 7s dropped to 100, off more than a point.

Irregularity characterized the federal government list, with transactions limited.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, (000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—During the greater part of the day the curb market was one of surprising activity and strength, many stocks moving up from 3 to over 10 points, and a long list again lifted their peak levels, some issues moving almost as a unit in this record-breaking trading.

Tubize Artificial Silk, which advanced sharply Saturday, had a further gain of 14 points to 375. Deere & Co. rose 7 points to 234 and United Biscuit moved over 2 points. Singer Manufacturing gained 8 points, Royal Typewriter continued its upward movement with an advance of 4 poins, and Ruberoid rose 5 points.

Pipe line stocks moved independent of the general list, those issues having their own special demand, the natural result of the heavy production of crude oil. Buckeye Pipe Line, Eureka, Illinois Pipe Line and National Transit were prominent features in these advances, most of them entering new high ground. Other stocks in the oil group were generally heavy. Vacuum fell 2 points after an early advance, and Ohio Oil declined over a point.

Public utilities were generally strong in the early trading, but the advances that were made in the first hour were not maintained. There was heavy trading again in Southeastern Power and American Gas and Electric. United Gas Improvement had a sharp advance in the early trading and then reacted.

General Baking "B" was active and strong, while the "A" stock reflected profit taking sales. Atlas Plywood, which had been in increasing demand for some days, advanced about 2 points, crossing 52. Newmont Mining, which rose a point, made a new high record, and American Rolling Mills also established a new peak price.

Field Goals Drop In Number With New Posts

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—Rule makers who aspired to curb the field goal totals, have apparently accomplished their purpose, in setting the goal posts back 10 yards, according to statistics compiled today. Of the 200 leading individual scorers in the East, only 15 have succeeded in kicking a three-point goal and only one such goal has been made during the entire season to date in the Western Conference.

ST. MARY'S IS BEATEN BY OLYMPICS, 12-0

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—"Slip" Madigan's boys of St. Mary's College bowed in defeat yesterday to a superior grid aggregation representing the Olympic club. The score was 12 to 0.

The Irish ball-toters who, early in the season, humbled Stanford, and who were considered one of the scrappiest elevens on the Coast, were clearly outclassed in every department of the game by the more experienced and harder-hitting club men.

"Cowboy" Kutsch, former Iowa State star, dished up a beautiful brand of football for the 20,000 spectators who had gathered at Kezar Stadium to witness one of the most interesting pigskin clashes in this part of the country.

WHOLESALE PRICES TO RETAILERS.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The cotton market opened easy today at a decline of 5 to 15 points under selling promoted by reports of warmer weather in the South and relatively easy Liverpool cables. There were rallies of 8 or 10 points after the call, on buying encouraged by the report of the census bureau showing consumption of 612,985 bales of cotton in this country during October, compared with 568,381 for the same month last year.

The bulges met increased offerings, however, and the market was barely steady at the end of the first hour, January selling around 19.85c and May 20.10c or about 8 to 14 points net lower.

Private cables reported hedge selling and liquidation with a poor offtake in the Liverpool market.

The market eased later under liquidation by recent buyers who seemed to be influenced by the failure of the consumption figures to bring in more buying. There also was some continued near month liquidation. The business included considerable switching from December to later months. December sold off to 19.67c and March to 19.90c, making net declines of 20 to 21 points, and prices were within 5 or 6 points of the lowest at midday.

Stock Sells Close To Year's High

Lone Star Gas developed noticeable strength on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, moving forward under steady demand to the best price attained since it established the 1927 high several weeks ago. Buying of the stock did not make its appearance until around the noon hour, when bids uncovered a scarcity of the issue and prospective purchasers were obliged to reach higher for the stock.

Rumors of a pending deal, heard in the street for months, were revived again, but definite information on this point was lacking. According to the old rumor, Standard Oil of New York is desirous of obtaining the Lone Star properties, but there are many observers here who place little credence in the report. Lone Star's earning power has been demonstrated forcefully over the past few years, and it is constantly strengthening its position in the Southwest gas industry.

Odd-lot trading marked the early dealings in the miscellaneous issues, while Arkansas Gas was handled in 100 and 200-share blocks with the price unchanged.

A block of $5,000 par value of the Pittsburgh Coal debenture 5s came out early at 99¼, unchanged from the last previous sale. Demand for this issue has been stimulated by the upturn in the company's stocks over the past several days. Current gossip is to the effect that the preferred stock will be retired.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—With the Argentine harvest reported progressing under favorable conditions, the wheat market here showed an early downward trend today. An increase in the amount of wheat on ocean passage was also a bearish factor. Starting [illegible] lower, Chicago wheat later declined a little more. Corn also was easier, opening unchanged to [illegible] off and subsequently declining all around. Oats were steady. Provisions headed downgrade.

Despite sharp rallies at times, wheat traders gave much of their attention today to the fact that not only was the harvest outlook in Argentina reported as auspicious, but crop conditions for the southern hemisphere as a whole was commented upon as generally satisfactory, with probable yields such that North America can with ease take care of any shortage. In this connection it was pointed out that, although the Canadian government crop estimate shows a reduction instead of an increase from last month, the Canadian yield indicated is the second largest on record.

Corn prices today continued largely to reflect the exceptionally bearish showing of the latest official crop figures. On the other hand, prevalent moist weather unfavorable for curing corn had a steadying influence, and so likewise did persistent adverse husking returns.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

4 KILLED, SCORE HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Week-end automobile accidents in the Pittsburgh district resulted in the death of four persons and injuries to more than a score. Two of the fatal accidents occurred at railroad crossings.

Frank Pryk, 11, of 457 Orchard street, Carnegie, died in the Mercy Hospital from injuries suffered when an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a railroad engine at the Gregg Station crossing, near Oakdale. The boy's father and two sisters and two friends who were in the machine at the time are in the Mercy Hospital suffering severe cuts and bruises. All were reported as recovering this morning.

TRAIN HITS AUTO

Attempting to push his stalled automobile from the tracks of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia branch of the Pennsylvania Railroad at a private crossing near Sygan yesterday, Andrew Kulick, 21, was fatally injured when a passenger train ploughed into the machine. The other persons in the car escaped injury.

Peter Derack, 70, of 1818 Belmont street, died in the Presbyterian Hospital Saturday night from injuries suffered when run down by an automobile in Chateau street, near Western avenue. Police are holding the driver. William Bundy, of 1441 Steadman street, was fatally injured Saturday when hit by a machine near his home. The driver was turned over to the coroner.

Stanley Ominowcz, of South Fifth street, Duquesne, was injured seriously this morning when a automobile in which he was riding was strucn by a taxicab in Federal street, near South Diamond street. Theodore Forrer, of 1229 Lake street, driver of the cab, and Paul Smith, of 640 Wylie avenue, McKeesport, driver of the car in which Ominowcz was riding, are being held by police. Omniowcz is in the Presbyterian Hospital suffering internal injuries. Two other men in the car with Ominowcz were cut and bruised.

STECHER DEFENDS TITLE

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 14.—(INS.)—Joe Stecher will defend his world heavyweight wrestling title against Renato Gardini, Italian grappler, here next Thursday night.

PINCHOT CHEERS M'GOVERN'S VICTORY

"Charles C. McGovern's victory in being elected county commissioner is the most significant that has happened since I have known anything about Pennsylvania politics."

Former Gov. Pinchot so expressed himself upon his arrival in Pittsburgh today to address this afternoon's opening meeting of executives of the American Federation of Labor, who gathered here to plan ways and means to give financial and other aid to the United Mine Workers of America in their struggle for recognition of the union in Western Pennsylvania and adoption of the Jacksonville wage scale.

"When a straight man wins over a crooked machine every decent citizen feels like throwing up his hat," continued the ex-governor, who was accompanied by Mrs. Pinchot. "There is no more crooked machine anywhere than the one here, and McGovern's election has state-wide significance. It is a sign of the times."

Pressed for information as to the candidacy of Mrs. Pinchot for United State Senator or things political about himself, the former governor simply smiled and added:

"I have talked all the politics I am going to talk and what I said I think is enough."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was expected to arrive at the Roosevelt Hotel, where Pinchot also is stopping, and where the meeting will be held.

ACQUIRING MORE LOYAL FRIENDS

Among the reasons why this Bank has numerous friends, and is making more, are these:

1. It has enjoyed the community's full confidence since Allegheny County was a farming district back in 1832.
2. It conducts its business with the care and prudence which attract and hold men of substantial affairs.
3. Its connections, locally and otherwise, are often valuable factors to its customers, when brought together by the Bank's efforts.
4. It promotes the progress of depositors by giving counsel on financial problems and by providing credit when and as merited.
5. It is a dependable Bank.

Forbes

Sentiment More Cheerful, Developments Are Mixed.

By B. C. FORBES

BUSINESS sentiment is more cheerful. And, of course, bullishness still reigns among stock market speculators; they consistently ignore sobering happenings and minimize declines of 10 to 30 points in their favorite stocks.

AMONG the week's favorable developments which strengthened optimism were these:

A very rosy forecast of 1928 automobile business by President Sloan of General Motors, following the declaration of $62,500,000 in cash dividends for the quarter, a new world record.

Announcement of a modest advance in steel prices, a substantial gain in unfilled steel orders and expressed confidence that bookings will increase.

An official corn estimate 150,000,000 bushels higher, raising what originally was pictured as a tragically poor crop to above last year's satisfactory yield.

The enormous over-subscription of $400,000,000 Treasury securities offered at 3½ per cent and a rise in government bond quotations to new peaks.

Less pessimistic views from certain oil leaders regarding the outlook for bringing over-production within bounds.

Strength in copper prices.

Colder weather brought about some improvement in retail trade in many areas.

The week's commodity price change showed more advances than declines.

Sterling advanced to $4.87, the highest in thirteen years.

Reparation Commissioner Gilbert succeeded in inducing Germany to pay heed to curbing proposed borrowing and expenditures which might interfere with the prompt fulfilling of her war obligations.

Hopes are running high that Christmas trade will prove unusually satisfactory.

THERE were, of course, offsetting developments, but they received less notice. Brokers' loans rose to another new peak and, perhaps more important, the reserve ratio held by the Federal Reserve banks went below the percentage of a year ago. The reported falling off in railway traffic was the heaviest, compared with 1926, of any week this year, eight per cent. October building permits were almost $100,000,000 under a year ago, Dun's records show. The cotton industry reported sales of standard cotton cloth last month equal to only 64 per cent of production and unfilled orders fell 13½ per cent during the month. Automobile sales are running distinctly below a year ago and the best authorities figure that the total 1927 output will not exceed 3,600,000 vehicles, compared with 4,428,000 last year.

SOON the country will be flooded with 1928 forecasts. All indications are that they will be quite as optimistic as the 1926 forecasts, which forecasts have not been wholly fulfilled. It can no longer be gainsaid that the second half of the current year has disappointed many. Earnings statements for the first nine months are far from uniformly favorable and although dividend increases have been numerous, there have lately come quite a number of reductions.

Nevertheless, it is entirely possible that the optimism which will come from high places will have a stimulating influence. Certain responsible industrialists emphasize very strongly that there has been rigid holding back of buying in the hope that prices would go lower. Very heavy ordering of steel and other materials by the railroads is predicted. The automobile industry is also looked for a new fillip to general business.

MEANWHILE, the bulls fight bravely on in the stock market. They made headway against the bears almost every day last week and the average quotations finished within eight points of the year's peak, reached on October 4. Incidentally, the average stands today 100 points above that of the original Armistice Day, nine years ago.

One reflection of how enthusiastic Wall Street feels is the sale of a stock exchange seat at $255,000, a figure never before touched.

If general business would only catch up with the stock market, how few complaints there would be. The truth is, however, that many complaints come from different parts of the country about failure to experience the national prosperity so widely discussed.

STOCK MARKET MOVES LACK UNIFORMITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—(AP.)—Price movements in today's stock market lacked uniformity, renewal of selling pressure against some of the leading industrials being offset by a resumption of bullish operations in a wide assortment of specialties. Call money was in plentiful supply at the renewal figure of 3½ per cent.

There was little in the day's news to influence the market. Reports of merger negotiations in the drug trade stimulated the buying of those shares, several of which advanced 3 to 5 points. Mail order and mercantile shares continued to respond to expectations of record-breaking holiday trade as a result of the large increase in farm wealth this year.

United States Steel common and General Motors were in rather free supply, but offerings were well taken. Strength of the coppers reflected the recent increase in the export price of the commodity, and the belief that the recent formation of the Copper Institute would help to stabilize the industry. Rails were rather quiet, although Chesapeake and Ohio was run up more than 2 points and half a dozen or so others advanced a point or more.

American Railway Express ran up nearly 6 points and was followed into new high ground by nearly a score other issues, including Kennecott and Magma coppers, Montgomery-Ward, Sears-Roebuck, International Harvester and American Can. Gabriel Snubbers was an outstanding weak spot, breaking nearly 5 points.

Red Grange Goes To Hospital to Rest Leg

NEW YORK, Nov. 14—(INS.)—Red Grange, New York Yankee professional football star, today definitely retired to a hospital for a lengthy rest as his right leg was placed in a plaster cast. Grange has been playing on the injured leg for several weeks. Water on the knee has developed, physicians said. C. C. Pyle, owner of the Yankees, announced that Grange should be in action again in time for the Thanksgiving game with Benny Friedman's Bulldogs.

BEARS GET THEM

CHICAGO, Nov. 14—The Chicago Bears put in another stroke toward the National League title and the retrieving of prestige lost in the East last Tuesday, when they defeated the Pottsville Maroons here yesterday, 30 to 12, in a poorly played but highly interesting football game.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Copper Stocks Strong.

Copper stocks assumed a dominant position in the market again today with several of the leading issues moving into new high ground. Kennecott was one of the leaders with Anaconda, Magma, Cerro de Pasco and others following the swing. Organization of the Copper Institute, similar to the Steel and Petroleum Institutes, was a factor in the advance. Prices of the red metal has been advancing steadily over the past two or three weeks and there has been considerable improvement noted in the statistical position as determined by production and stocks on hand.

Surplus Tax Again Proposed.

The Senate Ways and Means Committee is trying to evolve a plan to force holding companies, principally those owned by a few individuals, to pay out a larger proportion of their earnings. A bill may be so framed that even the large corporation will find it advantageous to reduce liquid assets and increase dividends. The proposed change fixes an allotment over dividend payments that might reasonably be retained by the corporations. There was a good deal of discussion as to what stocks might be most influenced by the adoption of such a provision. Secretary Mellon recently stated that he had made no recommendations looking to changes in the undistributed surplus earnings section of the Revenue Act.

Cutten Bulls Harvester.

International Harvester rushed forward today in response to a bullish statement by Arthur Cutten, Chicago stock market operator. Mr. Cutten said: "I am not predicting an immediate advance. The forward movement may be a long time off, but it seems probable that a period of two or three years will witness the move. I think it quite likely that a price of $350 or $400 a share will be reached by Harvester common. The company reports extremely good earnings which would be greatly enhanced were a less constructive method of accountancy used." Large blocks of the stock are said to be closely held, resulting in a small floating supply.

Columbia Gas and Electric.

Columbia Gas and Electric Corporation announced today that it had taken over the gas producing and distributing properties of the Cities Service Company in several Central Ohio towns, including Sandusky, Mansfield, Medina, Toledo and Alliance. This is the first official confirmation of the report which first reached financial circles several weeks ago. The properties include a complete transmission pipe line system serving 31,000 gas customers directly and supplying gas at wholesale to other systems serving about 15,000 additional customers. The deal did not include any of the Cities Service Electric properties. For the 12 months ended September 30, 1927, Columbia Gas reports net income available for dividends of $13,772,907 against $15,951,312 the preceding 12 months. Gross earnings for the year to September 30, 1927, were $94,741,512 compared with $91,464,131 the previous year.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—No sales were reported in the raw sugar market early today, but the undertone was firm, refiners showing interest at last paid prices of 4.46c for nearby Cuban and holders asking 4.71c.

Raw sugar futures were firm and active, reflecting the sharp advance in London and private cables from Paris stating that an agreement would be signed this afternoon between Germany, Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Cuba restricting the production of sugar. Prices advanced 4 to 6 points on active covering and buying by both European and Cuban interests, but there was a good deal of realizing on the upturn and partial setbacks followed with mid-day prices 3 to 4 points net higher.

The refined sugar market was unchanged at 5.90c for fine granulated. Withdrawals were of fair proportions, but new business was light.

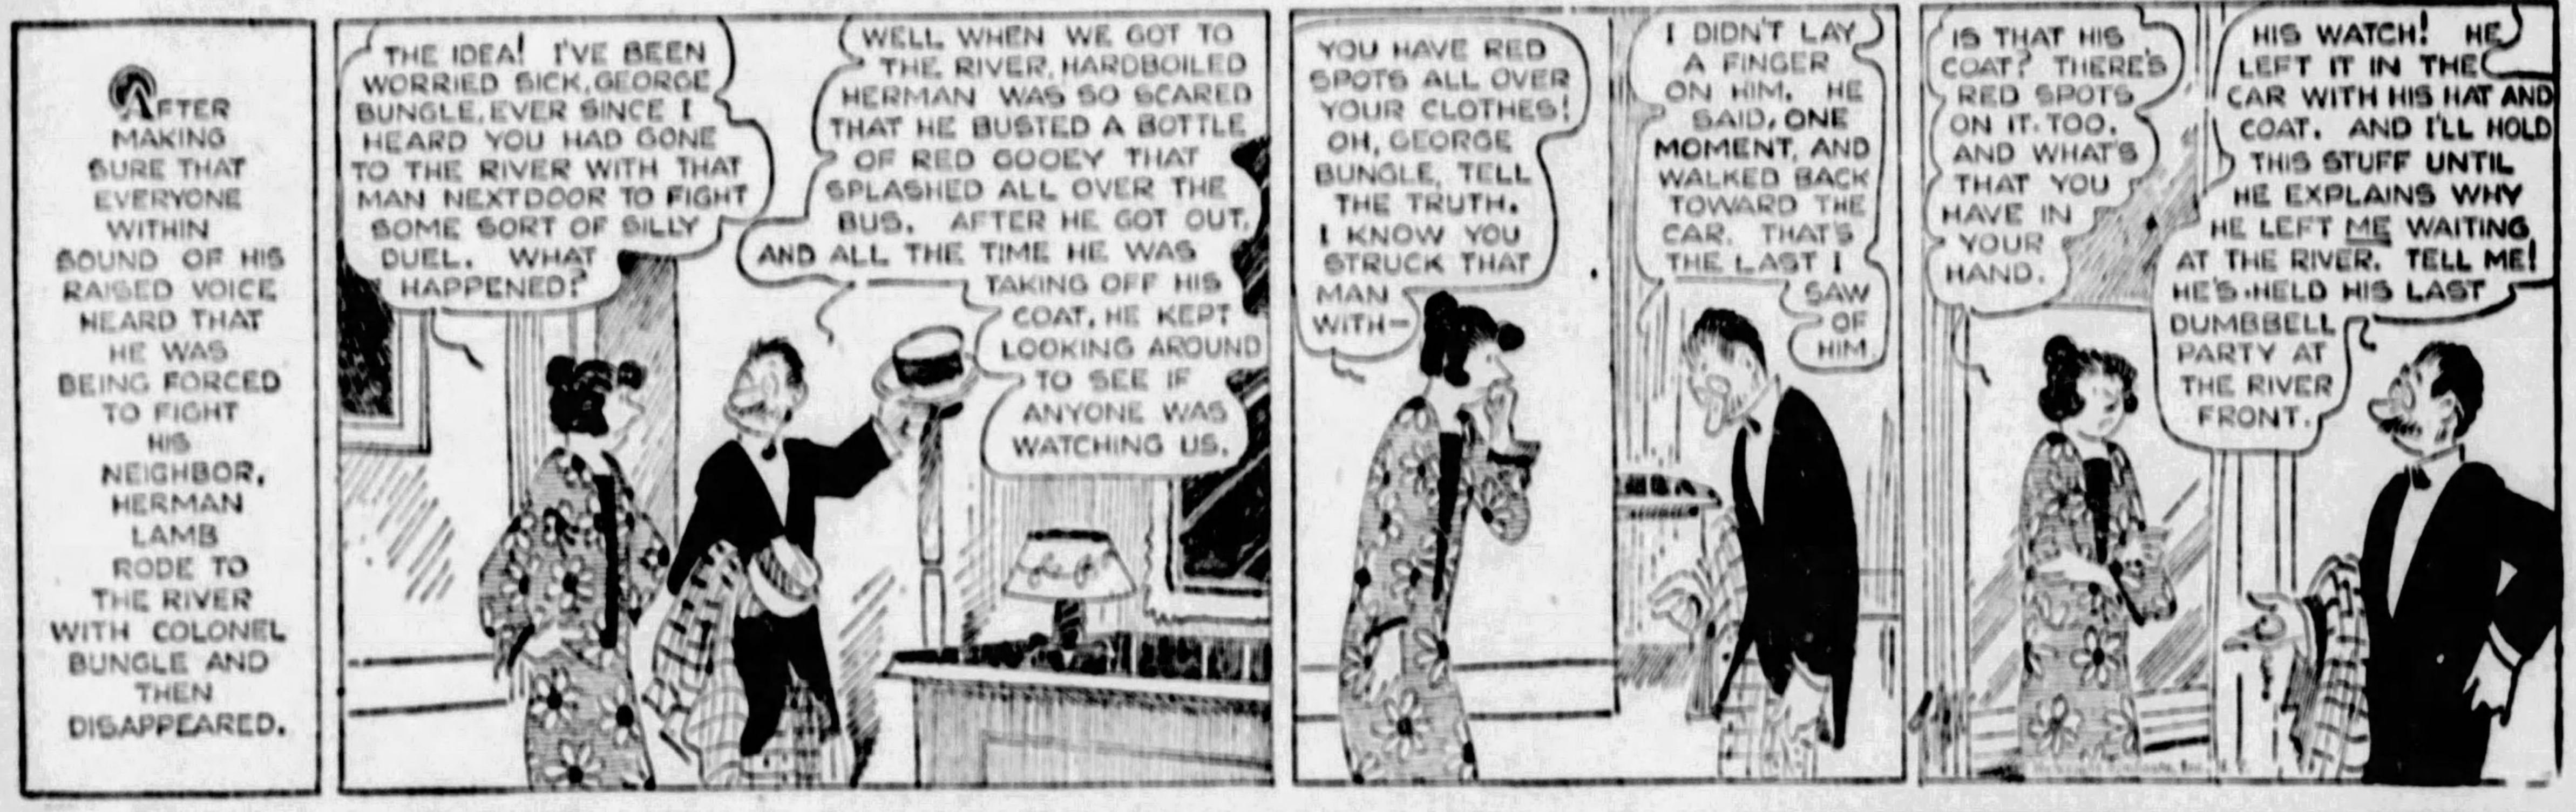
Herman, Please Call!



AFTER MAKING SURE THAT EVERYONE WITHIN SOUND OF HIS RAISED VOICE HEARD THAT HE WAS BEING FORCED TO FIGHT HIS NEIGHBOR, HERMAN LAMB RODE TO THE RIVER WITH COLONEL BUNGLE AND THEN DISAPPEARED.
THE IDEA! I'VE BEEN WORRIED SICK, GEORGE BUNGLE, EVER SINCE I HEARD YOU HAD GONE TO THE RIVER WITH THAT MAN NEXTDOOR TO FIGHT SOME SORT OF SILLY DUEL. WHAT HAPPENED?
WELL, WHEN WE GOT TO THE RIVER, HARDBOILED HERMAN WAS SO SCARED THAT HE BUSTED A BOTTLE OF RED GOOEY THAT SPLASHED ALL OVER THE BUS. AFTER HE GOT OUT, AND ALL THE TIME HE WAS TAKING OFF HIS COAT, HE KEPT LOOKING AROUND TO SEE IF ANYONE WAS WATCHING US.
YOU HAVE RED SPOTS ALL OVER YOUR CLOTHES! OH, GEORGE BUNGLE, TELL THE TRUTH. I KNOW YOU STRUCK THAT MAN WITH—
I DIDN'T LAY A FINGER ON HIM. HE SAID, ONE MOMENT, AND WALKED BACK TOWARD THE CAR. THAT'S THE LAST I SAW OF HIM
IS THAT HIS COAT? THERE'S RED SPOTS ON IT, TOO. AND WHAT'S THAT YOU HAVE IN YOUR HAND.
HIS WATCH! HE LEFT IT IN THE CAR WITH HIS HAT AND COAT. AND I'LL HOLD THIS STUFF UNTIL HE EXPLAINS WHY HE LEFT ME WAITING AT THE RIVER. TELL ME! HE'S HELD HIS LAST DUMBBELL PARTY AT THE RIVER FRONT.

THIS WAGGISH WORLD

by Roy K. Moulton

THIS finger-print matter is again bubbling beneath the surface of Congressional affairs and is liable to boil over soon after that august body meets in December. It seems to be in the back of somebody's head that every citizen of the United States must leave his finger-prints with the government. It is undoubtedly a good plan, but just what it is good for has not yet been explained. For one thing, of course, the finger-print experts can search the courts, areas and back alleys and find out who has been throwing out the empty Scotch bottles.

IT WILL probably be necessary for all householders to handle all Scotch bottles with kid gloves. That is the way to handle them, anyway. If you don't they are liable to explode.

We believe that, with our usual acuteness, we have solved the reason for the finger-print bureau. It is a reason that you probably would never imagine. It will put to work two or three hundred thousand new inspectors, enforcement agents, zone inspectors, finger-printers, census takers and the etc.

It is difficult to believe it, but there are still a few people who have not got Government jobs. Places must be found for them as rapidly as possible.

I MET a man the other day with a badge on and asked him what kind of an officer he was. "I am," he replied, "one of the Government's gum-wrapper statisticians. We count up and sort the gum wrappers found in the street in various parts of the country. For instance, only last week, we rendered a report to the effect that there are more pie eaters than gum chewers in this country."

A litle later in the day we met a static inspector from the Department of Radio. Both these boys looked well-fed.

WHEN the new finger-print department is perfected, the head of it will have to be an Assistant Secretary of War. He will have assistants numbered from 1 to 18 and there will also be:

Solicitor of the Finger-Print Department, with 27 assistants; 12 zone directors, each with 142 assistants and 25,000 operatives, some of them honest; 4,000 chemists, photographers and pad-inkers; whisky bottle inspectors; door-knob inspectors; inspectors to take finger-prints from flappers' backs in dance halls and night clubs, and street car strap and turnstile inspectors.

When this organization gets to functioning perfectly it will be possible to tell almost exactly what every citizen has been doing at every hour of the day—a consummation greatly to be desired.

THERE is some talk that the glove manufacturers' association is behind this finger-print legislation, believing that there will be a great revival of glove-wearing on the part of citizens with guilty consciences, who comprise, roughly, 89 per cent of the population.

The new idea has its possibilities, however. Finger-prints on the doors of private automobiles will tell much. Perhaps too much. Finger-prints will also show whether an anonymous letter was written by John H. Haftencamp of Seattle or Phineas W. Pogever of Bangor, Md.

BUGS BAER Says

THE big problem in medium weight autumn justice is how to keep an oil jury from sprouting.

The boy friend who told his pals that he was going to get a big motor car is something like the girl friend in the same situation.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

Both of them will be satisfied if they can get home safe on roller skates.

Seems that there has been some generous tampering with different enlisted men on that now hysteric jury.

If there were any bribes handed out after the case had gone to bat we cannot understand the delay.

But the man who accepts that silent bonus does so on the theory that the innocent should suffer with the guilty.

Something has happened to hush money in the last few years. The oldtimer who took it always took great care to breathe through his nose. If he did happen to open his mouth his alibi was that it wasn't him but a ventriloquist.

Now when a man accepts hush plunder he thinks its an advance payment on an after dinner speech.

However, justice will triumph in the end even though it falters at the start and sags in the middle. We refuse to allow them to syndicate our verdicts and to wildcat our juries.

A jury now seems to be a baker's dozen. It's the thirteenth guy who furnishes the dough. However, serving on a jury is a duty which we all have tried to avoid.

But now that it's paying dividends it looks like the jury business will be in big demand among the boys who can listen to the evidence with equity in their minds and cotton in their ears.

The citizens who avoided jury fatigue in the old days complained that the legal hiatus took them away from their work. And work was essential to support the wife and kiddies.

But, now every man seems anxious to be the setting hen on an expensive government egg. He wants to be a juror, and in case there are any vacancies he will fill them with the wife and kiddis.

Restrictive Sunday Law Out of Tune With Times

Who art thou that judgest another man's servant? To his own master he standeth or falleth. Yea, he shall be holden up: for God is able to make him stand.

One man esteemeth one day above another: another esteemeth every day. Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind.

—Romans, Chapter 14; Verses 4 and 5.

Among the laws of Pennsylvania there is one that is known to everybody insofar as its effect is concerned. It is known not only in the borders of our own state but far and wide. The act is that of April 22, 1794, more commonly known as the Sunday observance law. Those who feel that it is too much of a relic of the past to be a guide in modern life frequently refer to it as the Blue Law. The term, too, is an inheritance, one of semi-contempt for regulation which does, in effect, "judgest another man's servant." From the time the law was passed until the present there has been a feeling of that kind.

Yet thoughtful men cannot have any feeling save that of respect for both the law and its makers. Thoughtful men of open and liberal minds will believe, with The Sun-Telegraph, that the law of 1794 does not fit into present-day existence, but they cannot but admit that it is a symbol of the spirit of the God-fearing fathers from whom we sprung. Yet, it must be remembered that our fathers lived in one day and we live in another. Their lives were concerned with conditions that were more uncompromising than those we meet. Existence was stern and customs were stern.

They legislated to suit their own needs. They did not accept laws and customs that had come to them as royal decrees of some English king. Royal laws, no doubt, influenced the framing of our early laws, but our fathers put into their new ones their own ideas. To that extent they were the MODERNS of their day. It does not seem reasonable to assume that they expected their ideas to prevail among men who found them unsuited to the times in which they lived. We do not expect the laws we pass will be forever appropriate. We know that 100 years and even less will bring conditions to which laws we of today make should not apply. We give our fathers credit for having similar good sense. They legislated for themselves. They made laws for their times, but there is a whole lot of difference between conditions in 1794 and the present.

There is a difference in everything except the fundamental matter of—not simply morals—but of right and wrong.

However, is there any right that justifies any set of persons, no matter how high-minded, no matter how well-intentioned, no matter how God-serving, enforcing their views as to proper observance of Sunday on another set of persons, who may even be in the majority, and many of whom may be just as moral as their governing brothers? All of us have to honor those who stand for strict Sunday observance. Almost always they are persons of the highest character. In fact, it is to be wondered at that persons of such wholesome fiber cannot see the reasonableness of those who differ from them to the extent of feeling their liberties are being seriously infringed upon.

This is no plea for a wide open Sunday, merely as such, but for the right of all persons to "esteem one day above another," or "esteem every day alike," as each sees fit, without infringing upon the liberties of another. All have the benefit of the moral code, as represented in the Decalogue. All know the difference between right and wrong, as defined in the Ten Commandments. Let us, then, have a law that gives all the right of interpreting for themselves the admonition to keep holy the Sabbath day. The man who thinks he is not violating that commandment by indulging in innocent amusement or recreation takes the responsibility upon himself if he happens to be wrong, just as those who deny him that right must take the responsibility—and it is a heavy responsibility, too—of depriving a man of something that may be justly his.

The law of 1794 should be repealed, or, at least, modified. No upholder of the sanctity of this ancient act can reasonably contend that it has been or can be strictly enforced. They, themselves, violate the law every Sunday except insofar as they justify themselves by a provision of the law relating to works of necessity. Every day sees an accretion to the "necessities" of ordinary life and they have to be admitted.

As to the question of morals, is Pittsburgh any better, as a whole, than those places where life is not restricted by any "Blue Law"? Is church attendance any less in cities that do not have "strict Sunday" observance? Is the Gospel preached to more empty pews in Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit than in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh?

Let us be reasonable and face facts as they are and life as it is—and life today is a whole lot different than it was in 1794. We are living in the days of tolerance and good feeling. Why not let that fact become more evident?

Bountiful Living

An income of ninety billion dollars bought for the people of the United States in 1926 the highest standard of living ever enjoyed by this or any other country at any time.

Consider this statement by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in terms of things: automobiles, cigarets, open plumbing, chicken livers, tickets to the movies, radio sets, haircuts, fur coats, oil paintings, steam heat, books, travel, telephones, chewing gum, silk stockings—millions of things which millions of Americans were able to purchase for their welfare, comfort or pleasure.

Never so many things; never so much money, so widely distributed, to buy them; never so nearly the whole of the nation's population sharing in this "highest standard of living."

Americans are spending heavily—which keeps national earnings going up and prices going down.

But savings accounts grow tremendously, sales of bonds and other securities thrive, life insurance booms. Who is going to deny that Uncle Sam's great family is keeping a level head, while getting full benefit out of the most enjoyable living the world has ever known?

Garrett P Serviss Says:

What's in a Face

I HAPPEN to have come into possession of a bust of Voltaire which has greatly interested me, although I have never chosen the eidolon of that remarkable genius for a roommate. I find that this bust, which I have no doubt is a good likeness, startles some of my friends. Women coming suddenly into its presence clutch their throats and cry out, "O my!"

The general impression made seems to be one of repulsion combined with shrinking fear.

"What a mocking devil!" exclaimed one of my male friends. "He seems to be sneering at all mankind as stupid fools. But HE was no fool."

So the portrait of Voltaire perpetuates his legend as the Christian world has generally conceived it—a mocker, a devil, an instrument of Satan.

It would seem that Voltaire was unfortunate in his face, at least from the viewpoint of attracting friendship and breeding confidence. But it certainly proclaimed his intellectuality and marked him as a man not to be caught with birdlime—a quick and merciless riposter; repartee like gleams of lightning, cruel delight in a thrust that reaches the vitals, contempt for imbecility. One can see his swordplay with Frederick the Great. No man ever made words cut so sharply, none ever swung such scythe-like sentences. All of these characters appear on the face of the bust.

And yet it seems that the face denies the soul behind it. You must not undertake to read Voltaire in his portraits. The whole of the "mind's construction" is certainly not revealed there.

Voltaire did not make war on religion, but only on theology. It was not the divine part of the church that he attacked, but the man-invented part. Like science, he wanted the facts, the exact truth.

The mockery in the smile on the face of this bust is not directed at feeble innocence, with which Voltaire had a deep sympathy, but at cunning outwitted, at baseness betrayed; above all, at injustice dethroned and foul wrong revenged.

There is, too, a satisfaction expressed in that smile which could not arise from a bad heart.

Take Your Medicine

WHAT do you do as soon as you find yourself severely criticized?

Do you get yourself out of the way of the critic?

Do you seek another atmosphere where whatever you do will be condoned or smoothed over?

Of course no one likes to hear unpleasant things said of one's work.

But how are you to improve if you hear only the favorable things?

Perhaps you have prided yourself upon your ability along a certain line.

Then you find yourself associated with others who know so much more, that your knowledge looks like child's play.

What are you going to do about it?

Are you going to sulk, fret or worry about the lack of patience of that critic who deals so roughly with your so-called accomplishment?

Aren't you made of better stuff than that?

Stand up and take your medicine and keep your head so that you may understand more. Learn to correct your work and you may ultimately place yourself above criticism.

Something to Think About

By BRUNO LESSING

A Puzzling Question

"WHAT would you do if you were a widow, age 39, shut up for the last few years in a small domestic circle, into which no eligible male, bachelor or widower, ever strayed? Now a stranger in San Francisco. Attractive enough to have good-looking, well-dressed men look twice and sometimes raise their hats. Ignoring such attention I am wondering just what is one to do. I have all a normal woman's love of home and nice companionship and feel as if I were up against a blank wall. I have not the courage to give name or address."

Just why this anonymous letter appealed to the writer, he cannot say. It did appeal. It is rather well written and a note of sincerity seems to run through it. It should have been addressed to Beatrice Fairfax who gives advice to the love-lorn.

This letter has been lying on the writer's desk for more than a month for the simple reason that he did not know how to reply. Nor does he know now.

The lady is evidently unhappy and one always feels like helping an unhappy lady. Particularly when all she asks for is advice. But what advice can one give in this case? It was nice of her to admit that her letter was anonymous because she lacked courage.

It is difficult for a man to know how he would feel if he were a widow. The average man's instinct would be to break loose from such a domestic circle. Yet that advice cannot be given to a lady. She might easily get into worse circles than the one she left.

Nor can one advise her to seek acquaintance with the men she meets on the street, even though some of them may be very nice men.

One might suggest that she join a club or association or even a church where through those of her own sex she can eventually become acquainted with a number of men. The chances are, however, that this idea has already occurred to her and, for some reason or other, been abandoned.

It is difficult to believe that a good-looking woman of 39 years, with intelligence and personal charm has not managed to attract a number of men friends in her lifetime. But the lady says nothing about personal charm. And that is a more important quality than either looks or age. Are you charming, lady? If you are, the writer is afraid he must give up this puzzle as hopeless.

Perhaps, however, some reader may be able to help the lady with advice.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: "The Line's Busy!"

WATCH me bust into flames!

I've been trying to get West 008 for the last 'n' a half and the lady's still talking. I'm chock full of homicide, manslaughter, carnage and plain murder. Wherefore, I'm going to ease my feelings all over this column. And, I'll bet that about a million fellow sufferers will break right out into big, wet tears of gratitude.

Every morning, about 9 o'clock, I, and those other millions crash into action. Waiting us, on our desks are gobs of business. Important, urgent, let's-go business. Much of that business must be transacted over the telephone!

WELL, JUST TRY AND TRANSACT IT!

Draw yourself up to the phone, dear, give your number and see what happens!

Do you sell that bond, get that important address, make that date, rush those direction? You do not.

Line's busy.

Edith is telling Anne about her new hat—

Rose is pulling off a fight with her mother-in-law—

Alice is phoning Hazel about her marvelous new sheik—

Mrs. Jones is going into the details of her latest operation and making Mrs. Owens gangrenous with envy—

Line's busy! The minute they get the kids off to school they begin. Calling up their friends—listening to the latest gossip—spilling the dirt about their husbands—wondering whether they'd better let their hair grow, after all.

And it isn't only the Home Mamas; Cutie down at the office has her morning gab orgy, as soon as the boss is out of the room. How often have you bitten the blotter pad in impotent rage, waiting to give Sam Jones that urgent tip on Mountain Copper, while Sam's Tilly chewed the long distance fat for an hour with her Girl Friend? And what did you say while you waited?

No, don't tell me. This is a nice paper and the boss thinks my stuff is too rough as it is.

But, oh, boy, won't you welcome that day with yelps of joy, when they invent a telephone that'll jump up and bite a lady hard, right in the tonsil, when she's talked more'n 45 minutes at a stretch.

So, girl, I'm begging with tears in my eyes Havva heart! Tell it to Mabel after 12 A. M. or before the milk man comes or when we're all sitting around playing harps and comparing halos. But don't, don't, don't hold down the wire when us working guys are trying to start things going.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early to buy a great coat and one milk-white with beaver collar struck my fancy, but too much like a minstrel man. Up the avenue in a stiff breeze and had breakfast at the new Savoy Plaza with Fred C. Kelly, home from abroad.

Then home, where I missed Homer Croy, who came to call, and worried about the dog, which kept kicking out his left hind leg as though in throes of flibber-gibbets, and found some one had placed a rubber band tightly around his leg—a mean thing to do.

In the evening to Ann and Henry Sell's dinner party on the paquebot Ile de France at the quay and a gay gathering. Home late, where I began reading an autographed copy of Charlie Norris' book "Zelda Marsh," nor could I put it down until finished, and to bed.

Tailors—the thoughtful dears—are showing winter overcoats with an extra and capacious pocket for carrying a flask. It is lined with rubber in case of a leak.

The two silliest words in the language to my notion are "twitted" and "ducky." They appear in several current plays. Another hated word is "snooty."

In a candy store—where the girl clerks have an English drawl—I noticed a package of candy priced at $100. It was a Japanese lacquered box holding five pounds. There was also a French doll made entirely of candy priced at $30. I enjoyed looking at them. But I'm a gumdrop boy.

All the uproar about the theatrical ticket graft with threats of jail and what-not has simmered down to a thin whisper. Choice first row seats are still in the hands of gyp artists at gouging prices. The producers still profess to wonder—ha! ha!—how it can be so and the down-trodden populace doesn't much care—which, after all, is the real reason for the meanest of all grafts. Any other business indulging such pillaging would flop into immediate bankruptcy. Every year a great row has been stirred up and the usual amusing hypocrisy displayed. Until the people cut out the theaters, producers will not cut out the speculation. And being as soft as it is—why should they?

There is always some ingenious way to outsmart the amusement public for the simple reason that when they seek pleasure they do not count the nickels. What Gotham needs is more nickle nursers and fewer show-off spenders.

* * *

A chorus girl looking into a jeweler's window at a big diamond ring near the Rivoli Theater said to her girl friend: "I'd follow the villain to the city for that."

A Japanese in dinner coat, top hat, natty stick and monocle stepped out of a hotel on Madison avenue and it seemed to me the whole block turned as on a pivot.

A young midtown taxi driver has a little poodle—bless him—that sits on the floor beside his seat. "He just crept up there one night," he explained, "and has been there since."

Long before New York stirs out of its final lap of sleep the Central Park bridle path is alive with the thud of thundering hoofs. The Early Risers Club is composed of those who go for a gallop at dawn. Two of the members are past 70. Among the early gallopers is Will Rogers, who keeps three riding horses for his use when in town. There is a gentleman who has for years presented every Mayor during his day with a riding horse. The one presented to Mayor Walker has not been used by His Honor.

Several letters inquire how I could be seen in New York on a day that my daily article was dated from Tia Juana, Mexico. That is a trick. It is done with mirrors.

Letting People Alone

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Articles are appearing nowadays in the press saying that the white man should withdraw all of its merchants and missionaries and let China alone; she should be allowed to work out her own salvation without any interference from us.

It seems to be the popular impression that missionaries are busy-bodies who give us a great deal of trouble and are always asking for protection.

The impulse that made the missionaries go to China in the first place was an altruistic one. They did not go over to exploit the Chinese, but that exploitation, if there is any, is done by quite another class of Americans, though it is popular to give the missionaries the blame.

Just how far we ought to go to help make other people good is a question. Nobody loves a busy-body and everybody resents being helped along the upward path. Nobody wants to be uplifted.

The very spirit of Christianity is one of helpfulness for one's neighbor. What Christianity would do without the missionary spirit it is hard to tell.

The old hymn expresses the Christian's feeling:

"Oh, that the world might taste and see
The riches of His grace,
The arms of love that compass me
Would all mankind embrace."

What the world would be without this militant spirit of Christianity it is hard to say.

There have been the class of minds who have always railed at the missionaries and ridiculed them, but wherever they have gone in any country and wherever their work has not been thwarted by another kind of people, their influence has been good.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen, father of the revolution in China, was himself a missionary product.

Everybody who has been benefited by a great moral vision wants to impart it to other people. Of course there are a good many people who go about this offensively, and a good many others who resent interference with their private affairs.

To cut out the missionary spirit would be to emasculate Christianity. It is linked up with all the helpful reform movements of the world. Its aim is to make people better and many acknowledge its helpful influence.

To stop the work of righteous reformation would be unfortunate for humanity.

The situation in China calls for delicate and thoughtful consideration.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Misanthrope

HE always has a dismal tale to offer any listening ear; earth is, he vows, a shadowed vale and very drear. The men about him shrink away, affrighted, when they hear him speak; the bravest heart at such dismay grows faint and weak. Yet foolish is his grim delight in giving forth this sombre song. However, much he think he's right—he's wrong! For while he croaks the robin sings each morn his merry roundelay, and with the flutter of bright wings drives care away. The misanthrope is no man's friend, but steals away peace, joy and cheer, his hate makes life seem, in the end, a thing of fear. Men, heeding him, would reach the brink of woe, the bars to Paradise; we pity him, and yet we think he knows—he lies!

Right Angles

Be Somebody

AN ENTERPRISING real estate firm does its advertising with this slogan:

"Build a Home and Be Somebody."

For publicity that's hard to beat, it has the irresistible, human, personal and egotistical appeal.

And the implication is not far astray, to wit, that wealth, and particularly a home, marks a man as somebody.

The lack of money is a root of all evils—ignorance, disease, crime, hunger, cold.

And to be somebody implies culture with all its tributaries of yellow sands.

Home builders and house builders are not synonymous but the former is the better publicity term.

And home builders are folks of sense. They make payments out of rentals and turn their surplus to the reduction of the mortgage instead of to the hectic destruction of their lives.

David Grayson speaks eloquently of the fact that homes and dooryards are real estate and that all else is unreal estate. A home has tangible reality compared to which chattels are chunks of cloudland.

I know a man who went to his real estate dealer and asked:

"How can a poor man, who hasn't a cent, buy a home?"

And the answer was:

"That's easy. Here it is for $5,125. The owner wants $5,000 and that $125 is my commission for selling it. I'll loan you that $125 to use as your first payment. Then we'll fix the balance with notes and a mortgage."

And the man moved in the next week and now his real estate bears an assessment of $12,000.
